

Vancouver, Calgary, Toronto and Montreal. These new services respond to the growing numbers of Canadian tourists traveling to Mexico (about 70,000 in 1970) and to multiplying "people-to-people" communications between the two nations:

Mexico has a population of approximately 50 million and an area of about 760,000 square miles. The President of Mexico, Luis Echeverria Alvarez, was elected to office in December 1970. It is a federated republic of 29 states, a federal district and two territories. The House of Representatives is elected through universal suffrage every three years while the Senate is elected every six years.
