

At this time, given the evidence before us, the members of the Committee favour public education about the potential harmful effects of television violence in its many forms. The Committee also favours industry self-regulation over legislation. It is with this in mind that we review both Canadian and foreign initiatives against television violence in the next section of this report.