The second day of the 28th annual meeting of the District W. C. T. U. brought out further points marking the success of the unions in the past year, and besides the elections, which occupied the most important place on yesterday's program, the work of some of the most ardent workers was recognized by several timely presenta-

Mis. A. D. Rutherford, hon. Domin-ton president, was placed in charge of the elections, which resulted as folcarresponding secretary, Mrs. J. M.

Redmond; treasurer, Miss Lottle Harris; "Y" secretary. Miss H. McEwen.
At the close of the proceedings Mrs.
Rutherford received a lovely bouquet of pink carnations. Reports were then presented by the various superintendents, and Mrs. Dyson accredited to bear greetings from the Toronto W.

Mrs. Pugsley, who is departing for a visit of an indefinite period to Europe, and who has been a W.C.T.U.
worker for 27 years, was presented with a fitted club bag as a token of appreciation of her splendid work.

Mushrooms or "Toadstools"

Mushrooms or "Toadstools"

The Here are more than a thousand varieties of tungl that belong to one great family, once of them are "toadstools" more than another. This term, however, is used constantly to distinguish the edible from the unedible variety, and the methods by which the division is made between the two, is about as meaningless as the misnomer. The truth of the matter is that even scientists who have studied the fungl carefully cannot tell the poisonous kinds from the safe ones.

The "sliver," the "sail" and other tests fail so many times that the wisest way to secure safe mushrooms is to use only those you are positive about and not attempt to tact them at all.

If toe highly seasoned or cooked too long the delicate flavor of this delectable tood is destroyed, so after rinsing them in sole water and drying them gently with a soft cloth drop them for four minutes into boiling water that has been made a little acid with vinegar or lemon juice. Now drain them and brown them in very hot butter, add salt and pepper and serve on toast that has been moistened with steam and well buttered.

Mushrooms are excellent escalloped. Cook them until tender in the water, as directed above, then have ready a rich cream sauce, at the last moment add the yolk of an egg to it and a little paprita. Put the mushrooms in scallop shells and pour the sauce over them. Place in the oven until the puttered crumbs over the top brown nicely.

Where mushroome grow plentifully you may gather them as they reach perfection and keep them for use later. Cook them in the hot sait water with the fittle bit of vinegar, in it, as this blanches them and when they are tender enough to be pierced cashly with a long thin needle, drain and dry them in the oven. String them on a strong cord, as grandmu used to do with apples that were to be dried. Take care they do not touch one another while they hang in the sun drying, and afterward hang them in a dry place where there is a good airculation of air.

They must be soaked when used, or they may b

There are at least two classes of people who have realized the unusual severity of the winter just gone-the mbers and the gardeners.

The gardeners are day by day gradually giving up long-held hope for the life of prized stock. Some are joyfully watching signs of life in old vires and bushes which are only just now putting out leaf. True, the season is very late for some some forson is very late for some, gone for-son is very late for some, gone forever for some.

The number of old vines killed outright by the severe winter is legion.

All over the country sad eyes are viewing great widening cracks in Boston ivies, where the frost followed by a short few days of warmth,
caused a swelling and a splitting open
of great sturdy vines. Later severe frests entering these opened cracks caused death. Happily some are glad to see a few new shoots issuing from the old roots. Don't cut down any vine yet. Wait and see.

Grape vines are a daily worry to all amateurs. Don't cut down any grape vines that seem to be dead. Wait until autumn. If still no sign of life has appeared thruout the whole season, then cut off the vines just above the root. New shoots may come up next spring, if not perhaps this summer. Gardeners have not ha's such a winter to deal with before.

Important as it is to nurse the baby almost thruout the first year, it is equally important to stop at the end of nine or ten months. Gradual weanof nine or ten months. Gradual weaning has been the subject of a talk in this column, and it presents no difficulty whatever. The baby who has the misfortune to be deprived of its proper nourishment during the first year, must have the best substitute possible in cow's milk, carefully and scientifically modified, to suit the need of that particular baby. This is need to dead. But wait. Nature is old vines dead. But wait. Nature is a wonderful mother.

But with shrubs, the matter is rather different. Shrubs injured by winter seldom recover sufficiently to regain their old-time vigor. Where root-shoots are appearing, I advise cuiting down the dead bush. The new stroots will grow with all the stropper. shoots will grow with all the stronger vigor. This year's new canes will produce bloom next year, if judiciously managed.

Where a number of root-shoots are appearing, save three or four of the strongest looking, and cut away all the rest.

Then clip the ends down well, and encourage top-shooting for next year's blossoms. This is a good way to obtain a strong stemmed sturdy little bush in a shorter time than may be obtained by waiting for the stouten-

Magistrate Denison dismissed the charge of contravening the terms and conditions of the Fishing License Act, brought against Fred Ward in the police court yesterday. Ward had placed six hundred yards of net at the entrance to the old western gap in the island. Eric Armour, K.C., argued on behalf of the deputy minister of mines behalf of the deputy minister of mines and fisheries, stating that the license forbids the laying of nets within five hundred yards of any river, stream of creek. He declared that the gap was a stream of water flowing from lake to bay. The magistrate ruled that the gap was a channel.

Mr. Armour declared that an appeal will be filed. Mr. Garvey, for the defence threatened to lay a charge of theft against the department if Ward's nets are not returned.
