

ADVICE TO THE STUDENT

THE DOTS AND ACCENTS HAVE BEEN OMITTED IN THIS EXERCISE

Handwriting practice exercise in French, written in cursive script. The text is a continuous paragraph, with some words and phrases repeated for practice. The exercise is designed to help students learn to write without dots and accents, as indicated by the title. The text is written in a fluid, cursive style, typical of 18th or 19th-century French handwriting. Some words are underlined, and there are small numbers (43, 33, 95, 105) interspersed throughout the text, possibly indicating line numbers or specific points of interest. The text is written in French and appears to be a letter or a formal document. The handwriting is elegant and well-practiced, showing a high level of skill in cursive writing. The exercise is a valuable tool for students learning to write in French, as it allows them to practice the fluid, connected strokes of cursive without the distraction of dots and accents. The overall appearance of the page is that of a historical document, with a focus on the art of handwriting.
