

MACKENZIE KING WORKS
DOUBLE-ENDER ARGUMENT

Says American Quotations Are Higher Than Canadian—Later
Talks of Cheaper U. S. Goods.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 17.—(Special.)—Sixteen hundred people attended the Liberal campaign meeting in the roller rink Saturday night, addressed by Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, N. W. Rowell and T. S. Preston. Liberal candidates in Brantford, J. H. Runchey of the local trades and labor council asked for support for a government which he said had always been a friend of the laboring men, and said that reciprocity meant cheaper food, a policy which labor men always supported. In France and Germany highly protected countries, there were more unemployed than in free trade England.

N. W. Rowell charged that these Americans who spoke of annexing Canada had conceived the idea from reading the Tory newspapers. Mr. Borden, he said, had secured the co-operation of Bourassa in defeating reciprocity, although Bourassa had favored it at first.

Mackenzie King contrasted what the Liberal governments at Ottawa and Toronto had done for labor with the Conservatives in Ontario had done. The labor bureau founded by Mr. Preston, he said, was now a dead letter in Ontario.

Discussing reciprocity Mr. King said that American goods could not flood this country, as the Conservatives said they would, unless they could undersell the Canadians. This they could not do, as their quotations were higher than ours. Mr. King then said that the monopolies in Canada had driven prices so high that the only way for the workingman to get a reduction in his cost of living was to vote for reciprocity and let the cheaper American goods in.

Mr. Preston said the manufacturers would not be injured by the pact if they could get the same drawbacks in their raw materials as they got in their finished product. The speaker supposed they would get this as soon as the present tariff was lowered.

John McRae, a prominent manufacturer here, said he, too, expected to see reduction in raw materials made, and was willing to support the treaty.

MANY VOTERS, NO BOOTH

Big Area in East Toronto Appears to Have Been Overlooked.

Why is it that the big area in East Toronto riding bounded by Carlaw-ave., Danforth-ave., Papez-ave., and the city limits is without a single polling booth, although there was one sub-division in the federal election three years ago, when the population was not nearly so great?

This is a question which is puzzling Conservatives, particularly as, farther south on Papez-ave., there are two booths close together, one being at No. 330, and the other at No. 472. One theory is that the local patronage committee has not found a resident in the district whom it deems eligible, although there are probably a few scattered Liberals thereabouts.

Another theory is that the matter will be made to have the matter rectified, as otherwise many voters may be kept away from the polls.

ENGLISH IMMIGRANT DROWNED

Body Found in Bay Believed to Be
That of Walter Woodhouse.

A body was found floating in the bay near the ferry dock yesterday by Collins, 19 Woodbine-ave., and is believed to be that of Walter Woodhouse, an English immigrant who was killed by a wharves and a week ago called at the Newcomers' Inn, a letter. That was the last seen of him. The body, which was slightly decomposed, showed signs of having only been in the water for about the fourth of time Woodhouse had been missing. Letters found on him bearing that name and addressed to the Newcomers' Inn, led to the belief that the man was Walter Woodhouse, who was about 25 years of age.

An inquest will probably be opened to-day.

CALLS FOR HELP

So Numerous That Laurier Has to Extend His Tour.

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—(Special.)—Sir Wilfrid Laurier came back to Ottawa to-day and heard more calls for help from nervous followers. So insistent was the cry that the prime minister's intention of closing his campaign with to-morrow night's meeting in the arena has been abandoned. Sir Wilfrid goes to Buckingham, Labelle County, in the afternoon, and then to Rockland, in Russell. After a short speech at the arena in the evening, he leaves Sir Allan Aylesworth on the job and crosses the river to put in a night at the Devin in Hull. He will speak there in Montreal Tuesday, and probably at Grand Mere and some other point on his way to Quebec City.

"D" CO., GREYS, AT RANGES.

The scores at the rifle match of D. Co., Royal Grenadiers, at Long Branch on Saturday were: L. Corp. Tanley, 88; Pte. Bishop, 86; Sergt. Tinn, 85; Sergt. Saunders, 88; Q.M.S. I. Noble, 87; Pte. Brown, 80; L. Corp. Bell, 79; Pte. Dove, 78; Pte. Gries, 78; Pte. Hughes, 81; Sergt. Wiltchell, 74; Pte. Sellen, 71; L. Corp. Whitebread, 68; Corp. Culien, 65; Pte. Bassenger, 63; Pte. J. Pitt, 62; Pte. Burnard, 61; Pte. Pritchard, 59; Pte. McKinsty, 58; Sergt. Gerrard, 55; Pte. Westover, 53; Pte. Stephens, 49; Pte. Marshall, 47; Pte. Vitar, 46; Pte. Pitt, 45; Pte. Furkert, 40.

There was $100 distributed in prize money.

REAL INSURGENTS?

Never very pronounced Conservatives, so it appears, are those alleged insurgents that put their names to J. J. Ward's nomination for the Conservative World got in touch with three of those an evening paper mentions, and two, J. A. McDonald and A. Shannon, refused to say that they ever belonged to the great Conservative party.

W. G. Harris, another of the "Conservatives" who had put his name on the list simply because Jack Ward was a personal friend of his, and that while he had once or twice voted Conservative, he was certainly not a member of the wool party man.

SAVOY CONSERVATIVES WOULD PERSECUTE JEWS

Desperate Tactics of Ottawa Liberals, Which, However, Failed in Their Object.

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—(Special.)—A direct appeal to race and creed was made at a Liberal campaign meeting in the Hebrew Institute, in the rear of King, Edward-avenue synagogue yesterday, and threats were made by the majority of speakers, including D. J. McDougall, M.L.A., that if the Conservatives were elected to power the Jewish people would be persecuted and expelled from Canada. This is in itself an indication of the desperate tactics being resorted to by the government supporters to stave off defeat.

A. J. Freeman, in opening the meeting, declared that the Jews were always friendly towards the Jews. Before they came into power there were only 16,000 Jews in Canada, but now there were 40,000. He declared that the Conservative cry of Canada for the Canadians was aimed against the Jews. Canada said the speaker is for everyone. Bourassa was a bitter anti-Semite and bitterly opposed to Jewish people in Canada. If they voted Conservative they would be persecuted and expelled from Canada.

Continuing, the speaker said that the Liberal government deserved their support because they had appointed seven Jews to the civil service, and those appointments were due directly to the influence of Mr. McGivern.

The next speaker was R. Holst. He opened with the declaration that all Jews since pre-historic times, were Liberal in sympathy.

"How about Dineen?" asked a voice from the rear of the hall. The crowd roared with laughter while the speaker discomfited, went on to say that if the Conservatives were elected, they would persecute and expel the Jews from Canada.

Mr. Freeman said the manufacturers would not be injured by the pact if they could get the same drawbacks in their raw materials as they got in their finished product. The speaker supposed they would get this as soon as the present tariff was lowered.

John McRae, a prominent manufacturer here, said he, too, expected to see reduction in raw materials made, and was willing to support the treaty.

NORTH TORONTO AND ANNEXATION.

To-day the city council has to consider the annexation of North Toronto. The strongest argument against it is that it would be a violation of the municipal charter, and the exercise of control over its future development, is the establishment of civic carlines to the northern limits. The payment of a second fare at less than a mile and a half from King and Yonge-st. corner is a simple outrage, and to exact a double fare to go three miles and a half from King-st. up Yonge to the limits of North Toronto, when it is possible to travel three times the distance for one fare inside the city limits is a piece of extortion that will not be aided and abetted by any sane citizen.

What are you going to do for the people on this question to-day, Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

Mr. Alderman?

LAURIER-TAFT IS THE REAL "WHOLY ALLIANCE"

Unpopularity of Pact Shown at Big Sifton Meeting at Windsor.

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 17.—(Special.)—Concordia of the present unpopularity here of the reciprocity pact was displayed yesterday afternoon when three thousand people gained admission to the armories to hear and cheer Hon. Clifford Sifton. It was admitted, a far more enthusiastic demonstration than the one held the previous Saturday, although lacking somewhat in numbers. The crowd cheered at every possible opportunity, while the speaker was denouncing the whole course of national development, and the former minister of the interior declared that the adoption of reciprocity meant the total abandonment of the whole course of national development, and that there was nothing less than deliberate suicide.

Mr. Sifton took occasion to refer to the so-called unholy alliance between Bourassa and Borden. He said he was never particularly friendly to Mr. Bourassa, but he had no notion that there was any alliance with Mr. Borden.

In the question of reciprocity, involving the whole national future of Canada, I am pleased to see anybody opposing the government that can be so bold as to say that the whole nation is in the wrong.

Mr. Sifton paid his respects to Dr. J. A. Macdonald of the Globe in no uncertain language, blaming him for the annexation of North Toronto.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

"ANNEXATION" IS NOT THE WORD, SAYS HEARST

American Publisher Would Prefer
the Word "Admission," as More Soothing.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—William Randolph Hearst, proprietor of The New York American, has addressed a long letter to the editor of The London Budget, in which he says in part: "I have lately and even properly used the word 'annexation' in my newspaper, but I have been told that it is a very offensive word, and that it is better to use the word 'admission' instead of it. I would therefore be glad to know if this is a correct view of the matter, and if so, I will be glad to use the word 'admission' instead of 'annexation' in my newspaper."

There is not only no question of annexation involved in this action, but I doubt if there ever will be any question of 'annexation' strictly speaking, between the United States and Canada.

The word 'annexation' has a certain suggestion of force or compulsion about it, and it is not a word which is used in the United States and Canada.

The only possible 'union' seriously to be considered is the union of the United States to the Dominion of Canada, or the 'admission' of the provinces of the Dominion of Canada to the United States.

Mr. Sifton paid his respects to Dr. J. A. Macdonald of the Globe in no uncertain language, blaming him for the annexation of North Toronto.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

WANNY KILLED OR WOUNDED IN STREET FIGHT

Critical Situation in Vienna—
Mob Erected Barricades—
Troops Fired on Rioters.

VIENNA, Sept. 17.—A critical situation has arisen in Vienna, owing primarily to the high price of the necessities of life. Riots broke out to-day and many persons were killed or wounded. Troops fired on the mobs, which had erected barricades in the streets. There was a fierce exchange of bullets, and the soldiers were pelted with all sorts of missiles.

Following a huge socialist demonstration this afternoon outside the Rathaus, the police were ordered to disperse the rioters. The police used tear gas and water cannons to disperse the rioters.

There is not only no question of annexation involved in this action, but I doubt if there ever will be any question of 'annexation' strictly speaking, between the United States and Canada.

The only possible 'union' seriously to be considered is the union of the United States to the Dominion of Canada, or the 'admission' of the provinces of the Dominion of Canada to the United States.

Mr. Sifton paid his respects to Dr. J. A. Macdonald of the Globe in no uncertain language, blaming him for the annexation of North Toronto.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

Mr. Sifton declared he had reached the conclusion that the aim and purpose of this great experiment of Liberalism in Canada was to see that the markets of the United States were open to the world, and that this was what was behind Sir Wilfrid's mysterious utterances at Simcoe about other matters.

PUBLIC AMUSEMENTS'S
REC

Big Theatrical Company Arrives.
The "Thais" Company, which opens a week's engagement to-night at the Princess Theatre, arrived last night by special train from Pittsburgh, Pa., where the big Gaiety production has had a most successful run.

Mr. Gaiety has equipped "Thais" superbly with a special orchestra and a company of one hundred performers, headed by such well-known artists as Tyrone Power, Constance Collier, Julian Eltinge, Preston Kendall, Harold Mide, Frank Herbert, A. E. Walsh, Ralph Leonard, W. C. Bradley, Larry Christie, Arvy Campbell, Ada Clifford, Mrs. F. J. Fowler, Marie Dale, Lucille Carlton, Elsie Riser, Bessie Norcott, etc.

Mr. Gaiety's plan to this being one of the banner weeks at the Princess, for not since "Ben Hur" has there been so much interest manifested in a production of the kind.

Gertrude Elliott at the Royal Alexandra. To-night.

Leiber & Co. will present Gertrude Elliott at the Royal Alexandra for the week beginning to-night in Joseph Medill Patterson and play "The Virginian". The play is said to be an interesting study of modern social conditions, and it is expected that it will attract a large audience.

The play is known to be a carefully studied depiction of types and scenes in the