 In New York State Thousands of Policies Are Terminated and New Business Declines.

According to the report, the companies doing business in New York State issued $3,296 less policies in 1900 than in 1899, the amount of insurance written last year showing a decrease of $151,724,854. Moreover, 75,284 more policies terminated in 1900 than in 1899, and $48,648,766 more insurance.

PRIZE FIGHT IN MIDSTREAM

Dispute Over Decision Leads to a General Row.

New York, July 22.—A prize fight with bare knuckles, between Amy McCarty of this city, and Willie Hoese of Albany, two lightweights, was held on a barge in the North River to-day. A slight of the referee in the presence of more than 300 spectators. A decision of the referee in the fourth round, giving the fight to McCarty, because of an alleged foul, resulted in a free fight between members of the floating audience.

A ring was formed on the main deck, and after a long and tedious war caused by the principals insisting upon a slight of the purse, the fighters entered the ring.

In the fourth round, after Hoese had sent his man backing all over the ring, McCarty dropped to the floor and claimed a foul, which the referee allowed.

In a few moments the barge was placed all over the deck and bottles were thrown. The captain of the tug was told to make all speed to 15th-street, where was reached in about half an hour.

Stomach Cramps. COLIC.

THESE are very painful, and their attacks are often sudden and sometimes fatal. The principal seat is in the stomach and bowels, producing severe twisting, cramping pain, and often accompanied by vomiting. If you are troubled in this way, there is only one remedy to cure you, and that one is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It has a record of cures extending over 60 years and we have yet to hear of it failing to either relieve or cure.

Mrs. M. Second, Bristol, N.B., writes: "I was terribly troubled with cramps some time and had several doctors attend me, but their medicine did not do me any good. I got two bottles of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and they completely cured me. I would not be without it in my house."

Archbishop Bruchesi Blesses Noted Free Thinker, But Receives No Sign of Conversion.

Montreal, July 22.—(Special.)—H. Beauregard, ex-mayor of Montreal, former editor and proprietor of La Patrie, and one of the most remarkable men of the province, is at the point of death. Mr. Beauregard, who is a member of the St. Viateur Brotherhood, his early days, has always been known as the French call a "free-thinker," and great interest was manifested throughout the city when it became reported that the archbishop, recanted and expressed a desire to die in the faith of his fathers. The World correspondent visited the palace and obtained the true version from the lips of His Grace Mgr. Bruchesi, which constituted a denial of these rumors.

"I have done my duty," said his grace, "and can do no more." Then Mgr. showed the correspondent a copy of a letter which he had written to the sick man a few days ago, inviting him to approach the great transition holding the faith of his fathers.

It was in fact the letter of a good father to his son, as well as communication from one educated man to another.

The Mgr. followed up this kind letter with a visit, again entreating him to do a Catholic. Mr. Beauregard, however, while listening to the Episcopal ring and thanking the chief pastor with tears in his eyes, said he could not adopt a faith at the last moment, which he did not believe, but he added: "If I change my mind, I will send you a week passed and once more his grace returned to Mr. Beauregard's bedside. The archbishop gives the archbishop's own words: "I took his hand and said, Mr. Beauregard, do you know me, and also he nodded his head in the affirmative, he made no other sign, I then blessed him and left."

"And do you believe he was sincere, Mgr.?" replied the archbishop of Montreal.

DREYFUS MADE CHEVIERER

Ceremony Lasted But Five Minutes But Was Impressive and Pleasant.

Paris, July 21.—In the presence of a distinguished military assemblage, Major Alfred Dreyfus to-day received the Cross of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. The ceremony, which occurred in the courtyard of the military school, was rendered doubly impressive by being held on the very spot where the buttons and gold lace were stripped of his uniform and his sword broken 12 years ago. Gen. Gillan attached the decoration to Major Dreyfus' breast and felicitated him on his well-earned honor. The major replied briefly. The ceremony was over in five minutes, the general, Major Dreyfus and the army officials retiring amid the dipping of flags and a roll of drums.

The decoration of the major assumed an aspect of a notable demonstration. His brother officers, who were prominent figures in various stages of the controversy, were among the spectators, and outside the circle of troops stood Mme. Dreyfus, Brigadier Piquart, who shared in the court's acquittal of the famous prisoner; Anatole France, of the French Academy; and Alfred Capus and other literary men, who aided in Zola's campaign in behalf of a revision of the first trial.

The officers then repaired to the courtyard, where the trumpeters sounded four calls, announcing the entrance of the Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. Dreyfus and Targe, who were dressed in the uniform of a captain of artillery by the side of Col. Targe, their commander, the man who made the revealing discoveries at the war office which led to the rehearing of the case, stepped into the circle, General Gillan, a commander and Dreyfus as a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

Dreyfus and Targe, who were dressed in the uniform of a captain of artillery by the side of Col. Targe, their commander, the man who made the revealing discoveries at the war office which led to the rehearing of the case, stepped into the circle, General Gillan, a commander and Dreyfus as a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

After pinning the cross on Dreyfus' breast, the general gave the major the military accolade, the trumpet sounding and the spectators applauding.

The troops then defiled before Gen. Gillan, Dreyfus occupying the post of honor on the general's right hand, and Targe and the general being stationed to the left.

When the general past was completed, the trumpets again sounded four calls, and Dreyfus and Targe immediately were the centre of a crowd of officers and friends. Dreyfus went to the right and forward and threw his arms around his father's neck, which had not taken official part in the ceremony also came forward to greet their comrade. Dreyfus received the congratulations of his relatives and the officers, his face, usually impassive, twitched with emotion and it was with difficulty that he preserved an orderly calm.

Turning to Anatole France, Dreyfus said: "I thank you more than I can say, you, who have always striven for justice, have died before it was attained."

Col. Targe terminated his felicitations by conducting Major Dreyfus to his residence. Major Dreyfus, who is his residence with heart trouble, suffered a violent attack, but, thanks to his strong will power, he was able to retrace his steps to his apartment. Brigadier-General Baudouin and his wife expressed their sincerest thanks for their exertions in his behalf.

WOMAN'S WORLD

Knitting Cure for Nerves.

"My prescription, madam," said a physician to a lady who came to him, suffering from some nerve trouble, "is that you knit two hours daily."

"Knit?" exclaimed the lady, in amazement. "Why on earth should I knit?"

"Because nothing is more soothing to the nerves," said the medical man. "Nothing conduces to such a calm and cheerful frame of mind, as I could prescribe for you, but knitting will be better. It will do you much more good. I believe that a month of it will cure you." He spoke from experience. He had already prescribed that treatment, with great success, to a number of other women. Exactly what the effect of this simple cure for disordered nerves it would perhaps be difficult to discover. It may be that there is some hypnotic action in the movement of the shipping needles upon which the knitter's eyes are fixed. Such action, of course, would be very slight, but it is not impossible that it is sufficient to quiet the nerves, and that too in a much more salutary way than can be effected by any drug. At all events, the fact remains:

We have a notable testimony to this effect from a great writer. It is recorded of Robert Louis Stevenson that when he was restless or ill he soothed himself. He found the work soothing him, and he certainly was not a scientific explanation as to why it did so. Knitting may, therefore, be recommended as a "nerve cure" to men as well as to women, and, if it may not possess the fascination of a pipe or cigarette, it has this much to recommend it as its superior, that it costs less, is much more useful in its results—which are much more tangible than smoke and ashes—and does not annoy people, who dislike the smell of tobacco. One of the most useful of all remedies for nervous people, so, perhaps, now that the "profession" have become alive to its efficacy, we shall hear stories of the good offices it performs for nerve-worn patients.

Beauty in the Bathing Cap.

A bathing-cap, which actually improves the appearance of the wearer, is certainly a novelty well worth describing. It is out this year, and no longer does the summer girl dread to add a waterproof cap to her wardrobe. The new one is really good-looking. It is made in a variety of colors and designs. The inside of this novel bathing cap is lined with a soft material, and the outside of it is made of a waterproof material, and comes in a variety of colors and designs. The cap has the effect of a handkerchief, the ends of which are drawn up to the front of the cap, and are there tied in a jaunty bow; the ends are kept in place by a strap, which is just large enough to hold them so that they do not slip after trying.—Woman's Home Companion for August.

She Has Charms.

The charm of the womanly girl is that she thrives on how to be comfortable. She knows how to give a room an air of comfort and refinement, even though the furnishings may be the plainest. She is simple and unaffected in manner, and never tries to impress people with her superior knowledge. People like her because she does not act as if she knew all about every topic that comes up. She is willing to listen and learn from others. Her accomplishments, of course, add to her charm, but the qualities that make her lovable are the old-fashioned ones that make her a tender, capable and gentle woman.

Motives for Wedding Rings.

Of old and pretty fashion is reviving—the fashion of engraving motives on the inside of wedding rings.

Some of the most popular of these motives are:

Love to-day,
Love always,
God saw thee
Fit for me,
No heart more true
Than mine to you,
Love inspires love.

In the Sick Room.

Good cheer is better than medicine. The jest has an important part to play as a remedy for irritability. Don't tell long stories. Don't crush other people's trials. Don't think up miserable possibilities. Order, observation and obedience are three cardinal virtues in a nurse. Add to these tact the want of which is the base of nearly every sin a nurse may commit.

Inexpensive Ices.

Beat up three eggs and stir in 1 1/2 ounces of cornstarch moistened with half a pint of milk. Put a pint and a half of milk in a saucepan on the fire and when nearly boiling add the cornstarch and stir until the mixture commences to thicken. Then remove and add sugar to taste. Set aside till quite cold, then divide in half and mix up with a little vanilla essence and the remainder with fresh strawberry juice or raspberry puree if a still more economical dish is required. Pour into two moulds and place in the icing machine, stirring the mixture at intervals until they are firm. When ready turn out of the mould and cut in fingers, and serve a slice of each on the same plate.

Almond Blanc Mince.

Cold almond blanc mince is a nice dessert for warm weather. Make a paste of four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, wet with a little cold water. Stir this into a quart of milk, with four tablespoonfuls of sugar, and boil until thick. Flavor with a drop or two of almond extract, and stir in one cupful of chopped blanched almonds. Pour into a mould, and put on ice until very cold. Serve with whipped cream.

Ready for War.

The proletariat organizations have been preparing for months for just such provocation to declare open war. It is impossible to describe the consternation with which the Constitutional Democrats learned the news. Although it has been bruited for the past three days, the ukase was received by them in blank amazement. Even Saturday night's caucus did not believe the government would dare to take the threatened step and seriously discuss the attitude to be taken towards Minister of the Interior Stolypin, when he appeared in parliament tomorrow, to answer interpellations. The government undoubtedly calculated on catching the opposition off its guard, and that it should strike terror to the hearts of the members of parliament, it has failed signally.
