WAS BRICK HURLED 600 FT.? BANK DYNAMITING MYSTERY

Bookkeeper, Under Suspicion, Advances Awkward-Looking Excuse for Injuries Sustained.

Paris, Ill., June 10.—(Special.)—A common, ordinary brick, with chipped edges, is the chief defence of W. W. Juntgen, a bookkeeper, against the charge that he dynamited the Edgar County Bank early Thursday morning. The grand jury will investigate the case to-morrow.

The contents of the bank were left intact tho the vault was blown to pieces. A threatened run has subsided and $10,000 in currency sent by a St. Louis bank has not been needed.

The brick, according to Juntgen's story, was hurled thru the air, and before striking the ground in one place, rebounded and passed thru the window of his flat on the siuth side of Court-House-square, 600 feet from the bank. Juntgen says he was looking out of the window when the brick came sailing across the park, passing thru the screen and breaking his arm. It also scratched his face and partly paralyzed his left side, so he is in bed. Some persons are skeptical enough to hold the injuries were received close to the bank.

Everybody who has heard the story is impressed with the remarkable flight of the brick, especially as no wind was blowing. Officers of the bank are so interested that they put two Pinkerton detectives on the case. Juntgen will have experts to give evidence concerning the freaks of bricks and dynamite in case he is indicted by the grand jury.

Juntgen, who has been a faithful employe of the bank for 18 years, and against whom nothing ever has been whispered except that he speculated on wheat margins, has fighting in his interest his past career and powerful connections. Officials of the bank are loth to believe him guilty, tho they are probing the matter to the bottom.

Saw Man Running Away.

Altho Juntgen tells a straight story, backed by the brick and the hole, strong circumstantial evidence came to light to-day. Mrs. John Link has been subpoenaed to tell the grand jury of the man she saw running thru Court House Park a few second after the explosion. Mrs. Link occupies a flat in the square a short distance from the bank. Awakened by the explosion, she went to the window and saw a man in light clothes answering to the general description of the bookkeeper running south thru the park.

Daniel Wingart, another witness, will corroborate this story. Policeman Bates will testify that he saw Juntgen at 2.30, fully dressed, an hour before the explosion, drinking from the town pump near his flat. Juntgen claims to have been in his night robe at that time.

"I am an innocent man," said Juntgen this afternoon. "I had been up on Thursday morning with my 7-year-old son, who had whooping cough. I heard the noise of a buggy passing in the street and went to the window. At that instant a terrific explosion occurred and I knew nothing more. When I came to I was lying on the bed with a broken arm. I could have no object in wrecking the bank, as I have no grudge against the officials. I was not in need of money. I have speculated, but have lost no money. I have not the least idea how the explosion occurred. Marks in the Court House Park showed where the brick had struck the ground before bounding over in this direction."

Wife Corroborates.

Mrs. Juntgen corroborated her husband's story.

"I came running in," said she, "and found him lying partly on the radiator and unconscious. I telephoned for a physician as soon as I could. His arm was broken and his side was injured. The physician arrived about three-quarters of an hour after the accident. I picked up the brick from the floor. It had broken the screen."

This brick was one of the several thousand that had been piled up in front of the bank building, which was being remodeled. It was the only brick that traveled that far, but the doors of the bank building were found in the park, 60 feet from the scene of the explosion.

Juntgen is 39 years old and popular.

BIGELOW, BANK DEFAULTER GETS 10 YEARS, LAW'S LIMIT

Court Could See No Palliating Circumstances—Cashier, Indicted, Disappears.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 10.—Frank G. Bigelow, confessed defaulter in the sum of $1,500,000 of the funds of the First National Bank of Milwaukee, while president of the bank, to-day pleaded guilty to an indictment of ten ccounts, each count a violation of the national banking laws, and was sentenced by Judge Quarles to ten years' imprisonment at hard labor in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

The former bank president was turned over to a marshal and started for prison to-night.

Judge Quarles, in passing sentence, dwelt on the circumstances surrounding the case and with emotion referred to his own long personal friendship for Bigelow. Bigelow was visibly affected, altho he bore himself with remarkable fortitude.

Bigelow said he knew the nature of the indictment, and waived the reading of the counts. At Bigelow's request the defendant had no counsel.

"Being familiar with the indictment, what is your plea?" said Judge Quarles. "Are you guilty or not guilty?"

Bigelow arose, looked squarely at the judge and said: "Guilty."

"Have you anything to say at this time why sentence should not be passed upon you?" asked the judge.

"Nothing."

The district attorney said the law simply called for punishment, not vengeance, and called the court's attention to the fact that the maximum sentence of ten years ought to be sufficient, thus avoiding a cumulative sentence. Judge Quarles said:

Offence Aggravated.

"It is something more than regret, it is profound sorrow that I experience in view of the stern duty by which I am now confronted.

"The suggestions of sympathy that so naturally arise, based upon personal friendship, must be silenced by the just requirements of the law.

"The offence charged in the indictment is a very grave one. It involves the misapplication of funds that have been intrusted under the banking law to the care and keeping of an officer of a banking association.

"The crime not only brings great pecuniary loss and untold distress to many individuals, but it exerts a baneful influence upon society at large.

"Here is a man of high intelligence, ripe experience, enjoying the unlimited confidence of the people of this city, occupying high social station, who appears deliberately and thru a series of years to have been systematically false to his trust and guilty of repeated violations of the law. In such a case the court can see no palliating circumstances. The offence is rather aggravated because of the ability, splendid opportunities and commanding influence of the defendant.

"The ends of justice seem to require and the court is constrained to hold that the defendant should suffer the extreme penalty of the law."

The court then gave sentence.

Goll is Missing.

The federal grand jury to-day returned an indictment containing ten counts against Henry G. Goll, former assistant cashier of the First National Bank. The charges against Goll are similar to those against Bigelow. Goll left his home early to-day and has not been found.

Toronto Fresh Air Fund.

In a few days now the work of the Toronto Fresh Air Fund Committee will be commenced for the twelfth year. The readers of The World are too well acquainted with the work to make it necessary to go into details. During the time of its operations thousands of children and mothers have been benefited either by day outings or by being sent away to the country for two weeks and many precious lives have been saved by it. No person has ever been solicited for a dollar, and yet so many are its friends that it has never wanted a cent. It is most desirable that the children be prepared as soon as the schools close, and to do that there must be money in the treasury, and the committee feel that they have but to make it known, as formerly, to get all the funds they need. Rev. Canon Dixon, who started the work, will still be its treasurer and manager, and to him all donations should be sent (15 Toronto-street). His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Clark have already sent $10 each, as they have done for years past.

Rossland Ore Shipments.

Rossland, B.C., June 10.—Announcement is made that the Spitzee is to be made into an assessable company at its forthcoming meeting, which is to be held shortly. The shares are to be made assessable to the extent of $100,000, and on the first call $30,000 is to be raised.

A cable has been received from the head office of the Velvet Portland in London, announcing that work on these mines will be resumed as soon as possible.

The contract of the St. Eugene Mining Company with the smelter at Antwerp, Belgium, will expire on June 30, and after that date the ore concentrates will be shipped to the smelters at Trail and Nelson. The St. Eugene will declare a dividend of $70,000, or 2c a share, on July 1.

The shipments for the week ending to-night were: Le Roi, 2125 tons; Centre Star, 1850; W. Eagle, 1050; Jumbo, 100; Spitzee, 95; total for the week, 5220, and for the year, 151,734 tons.

France, Germany and Morocco.

Paris, June 11.—Prince Radolin, the German ambassador to France, met Premier Rouvier yesterday, with a view to conducting the Moroccan crisis in more conciliatory channels. The discussion was not entirely official.

The government's decision upon the German note with reference to a conference of the powers will be reserved until France has had an opportunity to canvass the sentiment in London, Rome, Madrid, Washington and other capitals, heretofore considered friendly to the French view.

DOES THE CZAR WANT PEACE? EUROPE IS A BIT DOUBTFUL

Acceptance of Roosevelt's Suggestion May Be Only a Move to Gain Time.

London, June 10.—(N. Y. Sun Cable.)—Now that the exact official status of the peace preliminaries is known, it is important to examine the situation with great care and avoid all sweeping deductions. It would be most unwarranted, for instance, to assume from the present results of President Roosevelt's good offices that peace is in sight.

The question that first arises is that of Russia's good faith in consenting to open negotiations. That Russia should desire an immediate and prolonged armistice is sufficiently obvious. On the other hand, it is equally certain that Japan's interests are opposed to any cessation of hostilities unless permanent peace is reasonably sure to follow.

It is the consensus of European opinion regarding the war situation that President Roosevelt's intervention at the present moment is distinctly favorable to Russia, while if it succeeds it will cut short Japan's assured triumph. Another two months of military operations would place Japan in occupation of important Russian territory, if not of Vladivostock itself. Her position in peace negotiations would then be immensely stronger than to-day. Full credit must be given Japan, therefore, for her great magnanimity in consenting to negotiate at the present moment.

It must not be inferred that there is any criticism in Europe of President Roosevelt for acting at this juncture. Such criticism if it existed would come from Great Britain, which desires the complete success of her ally. British opinion, like that of the continent, heartily commends and congratulates the president on his skilful and successful initiative. There is unfortunately nothing in St. Petersburg advices, either public or private, to confirm the belief that the czar is genuinely desirous of peace. There has been no change in his attitude toward the personal advisers who have dominated his policy for a long time past. His ministers unanimously favor a speedy end to the war, but they have no longer any function, not even in an advisory capacity, in shaping the national policy. A break occurred on March 3, the day of the issue of the two famous imperial manifestoes.

An Inside Story.

It is interesting to recount briefly the true story of how the czar finally cut loose from his liberal advisers and committed himself to the reactionaries who still control him. The council of ministers was accustomed to meet the czar every Friday. The famous reactionary ukase appeared on the morning of March 3. The ministers, who previously had no knowledge of it, discussed it on the train going to Tsarskoe Selo. They had no means of coming to an agreement in regard to the internal policy, but recognizing the immense revolutionary peril created by the manifesto they hastily agreed to urge the czar to issue a liberal supplementary proclamation.

The czar greeted them with a document in his hand, saying: "I know your views regarding popular concessions, gentlemen, and I have embodied them in this rescript, which I leave with you to discuss during luncheon. Give me your ideas afterward."

The ministers when left alone read the paper and found that it had been skilfully drawn. The draft was designed to emphasize the known differences of opinion among them. It was clear that the emperor desired to throw them into hopeless dissension.

The same minister who proposed the agreement on the train now said: "Gentlemen, the purpose of this document is fully apparent, but to save the country from being plunged into anarchy I move that we bury our differences and accept this rescript. If we do not we will get nothing." This suggestion prevailed.

The czar entered the room, after luncheon, smiling: "Well, gentlemen," he said, "What do you think of my rescript?"

The reply was: "Sire, we unanimously consider it an admirable document. It will do much to pacify the country. It only remains for your Majesty to sign it and we will issue it immediately."

Amazed Him.

The emperor's face was the picture of amazement. He did not speak for a moment. Then he turned from one to another of the ministers, whose views he knew were strongly opposed to features of the paper, and asked them if they approved all of them. They answered in the affirmative. The czar then silently signed the document and left the room. No council of the ministers was summoned to Tsarskoe Selo after that day.

This bit of inside history demonstrates the complete separation of the czar's own ministers from the actual policy of the autocracy. This policy and the individuals who frame it are still unalterably opposed to peace. They would like to secure a respite in the military operations in Manchuria. They are curious to know what sort of terms Japan would impose if Russia abandoned the conflict. They are quite capable of accomplishing both objects by a trick similar to that which the czar, under their instigation, attempted on the ministers last March. They have no intention of permitting the emperor to accept terms which Japan reasonably may ask, if they can prevent his doing so. They are always at the emperor's elbow. Their influence may be stronger than that of an occasional visit from Mr. Meyer, the American ambassador, even altho the latter speaks the friendly counsel of President Roosevelt.

Just Temporizing.

It has been ascertained at the foreign office at St. Petersburg, that when notification is received from President Roosevelt that Japan has appointed, or is appointing representatives to communicate peace proposals, Russia will nominate representatives to receive them.

However, a member of the czar's military staff said to-night: "Russia was never further from considering peace than at the present hour. The emperor will temporize intentionally, but to sign a treaty of peace conditioned on his recognition that Russia's misfortunes for the last sixteen months are irretrievable is completely outside the czar's conception of his duty to Russia and regard for her destiny."

When asked what were the czar's motives in granting permission to President Roosevelt to open the subject, this officer replied that it was most desirable by any means to obtain from Japan a statement of her terms. Then the Russian people would see what humiliation, what complete abandonment of the imperial mission on the Pacific, they were expected to accept.

He declared that all Russians irrespective of party would resist payment of an indemnity. He cited the utterances of the Liberal leaders in the zemstvos that the payment of an indemnity would be doubly objectionable from the point of view of Liberalism, first, because the money would be used by Japan in establishing militarism as governmental policy, as was the case in Prussia after 1870, and secondly, because the money would all be taken from resources which are urgently needed for the development of the country and the improvement of the conditions of the people.

Not Deaf, But Immovable.

He concluded, therefore, that the czar permitted the approaches of President Roosevelt in order to show that he was not deaf to the opinions of the outside world, but was immovable in the determination to sustain his army until it has overcome the enemy.

The view expressed by a diplomat representing interests allied to those of Russia indicates the belief held widely in the most competent political circles.

"America's desire for peace is not only absolutely sincere but is greater than that of either belligerent. When President Roosevelt invited the czar to discuss peace in the interest of the world the creator of the Hague tribunal could not refuse. He could, however, say 'whom am I to discuss peace with?' and expect President Roosevelt to be able to follow the invitation by the announcement that his adversary offered to name a representative. It will become a question when definite proposals are advanced whether the emperor will view the sacrifice of national honor and interests to be outweighed by a desire to further the world's peace."

The Russian press is conducting a campaign against the payment of any indemnity to Japan. The opinion in court circles is that the war should continue.

PUBLIC AMUSEMENTS.

Eugenie Blair assumes the dual role of Lady Isabel and Madame Vine in the famous play of "East Lynne" at the Grand this week. This will be a character study, in admirable contrast to her "Paula Tanqueray" and "Nancy Sikes," affording her audiences an excellent opportunity for judging the wide range of her dramatic talent. Her company, too, will be seen to especial advantage, as the play has been given this season with great success in New York and Philadelphia. The play will be given an elaborate and artistic stage setting, all the scenery and furnishing having been prepared especially for this production. There will be fine interiors of English country homes and glimpses of English landscapes. Alternating with the strong emotional scenes there are bright interludes of wholesome comedy, in fact the strength of the play consists in its varied appeal to all tastes, comedy and tragedy being effectually intermingled. The play has been cast as follows: Sir Francis Levison, Edmund Elton; Archibald Carlyle, Albert Andrews; Lord Mount Severn, J. C. Fenton; Richard Hare, J. T. Doyle, Mr. Dill, W. H. Pendergast; Barbara Hare, Harriet Ross; Miss Carlyle, Hattie Arnold; Joyce, Naomi Arnold; Wilson, Grace Farrel; Little Willie, Baby Simpson.

The Queen's Own Band, under the direction of Bandmaster G. J. Timpson will play the following program in Queen's Park to-night: March, "The Cavalier," S. P. Harris; selection, "Red Feather," R. DeKoven; cornet solo, selected, Band Sergt. Savage; (a) A Bit of Blarney, J. F. Help; (b) Yankee Girl, R. Lamp; waltz, "Glorie De Dijon," Andrew; Voyage in a Troopship, "Nautical Fantasia," G. Accident at Barn Raising.

WHY THAT WEARINESS?
Unnatural to Be Always Restless, Weak, Uneasy.
THE CURE IS SIMPLE
Your work has been hard and took lots of nerve-force. It lasted so far, but now it's all gone and you feel half dead. Somehow you must get more vitality. The water in your blood must be turned into nutriment and building material.
This is just what happens in using Ferrozone, which renews the blood and nerves and makes each organ do the work that Nature expects of it.
Ferrozone quickly increases your weight, brings appetite and healthy color, instills a reserve of vigor into the system that defies weariness, exhaustion, debility or sickness of any kind.
The enormous strengthening power of Ferrozone is proved in the case of Mrs. Edward Hill of Orr Lake, P.O., Ont., who says:
"Two years ago I had nervous breakdown. At night I tossed restlessly in bed, unable to get any comfort or rest from sleep. In the morning I suffered from overpowering weakness. My appetite was poor, I grew pale and thin and a despondent feeling possessed my mind continually. A slight hacking cough also added to my burden.
"My doctor said I might try Ferrozone, and it did me good in a few days. I increased in strength, the nervous sensations disappeared and with my appetite came back my color and good spirits. I have gained over ten pounds in weight, and my age is 56. I consider Ferrozone is a marvel."
(Signed) Mrs. Edward Hill.
REMEMBER THIS: Ferrozone is a true tonic—not an alcoholic stimulant. Fifty chocolate coated tablets in a box for fifty cents, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or N. C. Polson and Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

AN AX AND A REVOLVER IN CHICAGO STRIKE RIOTS

Colored Teamster Loses Fingers in Saving His Life—Policeman Shoots Paperhanger.

Chicago, June 10.—To-night, while Frederick Jones, a colored teamster, was unloading lumber at an uncompleted building at West 18th and Sangamon-streets, a mob numbering 1000 men, women and children, gathered around him and began to throw stones and other missiles. Policemen Benson and Schempser, who were guarding the wagon, drew clubs and attempted to drive back the mob, but with little effect. While the trouble was at its height, John Hince, a union teamster, forced his way thru the crowd, and, coming up to Jones when he was stooping over, throwing off some lumber, struck him over the head with an ax, cutting a gash in his scalp three inches long.

Hince struck a second time, taking off several fingers of Jones' left hand, which he raised to protect himself. Hince then attempted to escape, but was captured. The condition of Jones is serious.

Samuel Rohlston, a paperhanger, was shot and killed to-night by Frank Austin, a colored policeman, who was guarding a wagon owned by Rothschild & Co. The wagon was passing 43rd and State-streets when one of a crowd of men shouted at the driver. No violence was offered, but, according to the statements of witnesses, the colored policeman became excited, and, drawing his revolver, fired directly into the crowd of men. The policeman was arrested.

CONTRACTOR TAKES STRYCHNINE.

W. H. Irwin of Blenheim Suicides at Ridgetown.

Ridgetown, June 10.—W. H. Irwin, a contractor, living in Blenheim, was found dead in his room at the Arlington Hotel here to-night. He went to his room about 4 o'clock and no one had seen him around from that time until one of the girls at the hotel opened his door and found him lying upon the bed.

Coroner Young found a paper which had contained a powder, and Bawden's drug store identified it as paper in which ten grains of strychnine had been put for him this afternoon, and upon which two "poison" labels were placed.

Irwin was 48 years old and leaves a wife and three children, who are living in Blenheim; also a sister in Ridgetown.

The civic complimentary trip among the Thousand Islands on Saturday afternoon was very enjoyable.

On Monday afternoon the assembly will decide upon its next place of meeting. London has given an invitation. It will also receive a deputation from the Montreal Methodist conference.

EXTENSION OF MILLING COMPANIES

Ogilvie and Lake of Woods Concern Have Big Projects.

Montreal, June 10.—(Special.)—The next few weeks will see plans completed by the two largest Canadian milling companies, the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited, and the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., for many large and extensive additions to their respective plants.

Since the return to the city of C. R. Hosmer, president of the Ogilvie Co., the directors have had several meetings to discuss a plan which will practically result in the re-organization of the company and by dividing the milling and grain departments of the business will permit of both departments being much more largely extended.

As to the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. the president, Robert Meighen, will arrive in the city to-day from London, and steps will be taken for the establishment of the projected large mills and elevators at Montreal and Winnipeg. The Toronto interests that have recently become connected with the company are particularly anxious that the company should be placed in a position to take full advantage of the rapid growth of the Canadian Northwest.

RIVER RISES 7 FEET IN 3 HOURS.

Mississippi Rises Six Feet and Whole Valley is in Flood.

Keokuk, Iowa, June 10.—The Des Moines River here rose seven feet in three hours to-day and is still rising fast. There is an almost equally remarkable flood in the Mississippi here. The levee protecting the Town of Alexandria, Mo., has been broken and water has started thru the town.

Never before has the Des Moines River made such a tremendous jump. The great volume of water from the Des Moines joining the flood in the Mississippi will sweep all lowlands in Illinois and Missouri from Keokuk to Hannibal. The Mississippi River to-day showed a rise of six feet, breaking all records here. The government locks are flooded and the danger line has been passed by over two feet. Two terrific rainstorms during the night caused all creeks to become raging torrents.

The Mississippi, like the Des Moines, is still rising at a rapid rate, with prospects of much damage. All railroad trains are delayed on account of washouts.

The Difference.

Mr. Eubedee: "Yes, I've changed a good deal since then, Mrs. Jones."

Mrs. Jones: "And for the better, I trust."

Mr. Eubedee: "They used to call me a wild youth, you remember; but now—"

Mrs. Jones: "Now ?"

Mr. Eubedee: "Now they call be an old reprobate."

FIRST TIME IN THIRTY YEARS:

Ben Greet Co. Presents "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

A very pleasant two hours was spent in the gymnasium at the university on Saturday afternoon by a fair-sized audience, in listening to Ben Greet's presentation of Shakespeare's play "Two Gentlemen of Verona." It is nearly thirty years since this play was given in this city, and one wonders that with such interesting detail, such romance and such life-like situations, it has not been staged here oftener. The humor introduced into it by Ben Greet as Launce is of a very refined kind, and the buffoonery, tho at times ridiculous, has a depth of thought which is alone found in Shakespeare's works. The two gentlemen, Valentine and Proteus, are well taken in Dallas Anderson and J. Sayer Crawley. The perfidy of Proteus and the kindly, forgiving nature of Valentine, which in the finale terminates with rhetoric of impassioned invective, caused by his love for and long separation from Sylvia, is carefully unfolded. Sylvia herself, in spurning the advances of Proteus, who has been the means of Valentine's banishment by an intrigue in which he is caught on the eve of an elopement, is emotional to a nicety. Her scorn is powerful and effective. Deliberate enough to carry the full force of its meaning and calm enough to preserve its earnestness. The little dog witnesses many tears and some trying situations; but says nothing. Shakespeare uses this dog to give to the dialog a sentiment of every-day life not usually expressed, which is very cleverly brought out in the character Launce. The audience was greatly delighted with the play, which was neither too long nor too short and was interesting in every word and action.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.

Two Bullets Find Billet in Colonel of Kieff, Secret Police.

London, June 10.—A despatch to a news agency from Kieff, Russia, says an attempt was made this afternoon to assassinate Lieut.-Col. Spiridovitch of the secret service police.

The colonel was walking in the Main street of the city when an unknown man fired twice at him with a revolver.

Both shots were effective, and Spiridovitch was seriously wounded.

His assailant escaped.
