A SONG OF GROWTH

(C. G. D. Roberts in University Monthly.)
In the heart of man
Is a thought unfurled,
Reached its full span
It shakes the world,
And to one high thought
Is a whole race wrought.

The great work grows,
Not with foolish voice
But in repose—
Not in the rush
But in the hush.

A WOMAN'S STORY.

Once there was a woman who went away to visit distant relatives and remained a year. Her husband kept bachelor's hall and did his own cooking. When the woman returned home after the long absence she discovered a giant mountain that loomed up from the street of the absence she discovered a giant mountain that loomed up from the back yard and overshadowed the house.

"Gracious, John!" she exclaimed in awe.

"What in the world is that?"

John smiled.

John smiled.

"That, madam," he replied, blandly, "is a mountain of dishes. I have been heaping them up there and waiting for you to come home and wash them."

Which goes to show that John was not different from other men who keep bachelor's hall.—Chicago News.
