W. G. JORDAN DEAD

Business Manager of Globe and Very Worthy Citizen
Passes Away

In the death of William Coleman Jordan, business manager of the Globe newspaper and secretary of its corporation, which occurred at his home, 730 Main street, about 7.30 this morning, St. John was bereft of one of its most genial and courteous gentlemen, a helper in all good and charitable causes, and a general official in several philanthropies and generally speaking a citizen who helped make life worth the living for all with whom he came in contact.

It was known to those who knew Mr. Jordan best that for a considerable period he had not been enjoying robust health. He suffered by spells with a weakened heart and was constrained to take the most exacting care of himself to avoid overtaxing his strength. About a week ago he felt it necessary to remain at home to recuperate but a gradual sinking ensued. He seemed to realize his predicament and true to form he met the end with characteristic spirit of resignation and a smile.

Mr. Jordan was fifty-two years of age. He was son of the late William W. Jordan who in older times conducted a large business in Market square. When a youth he was an athlete of more than local repute, being especially well-known for his fast sprint and as a cricketer. The personal popularity that Mr. Jordan enjoyed in business existed during his early period of his life as well.

To the public he was well known as connected with the accounting department of the Daily Telegraph. He was considered by the fraternity both in St. John and at the sources of news and material supply as one of the best informed newspaper managers in Canada. In local circles he enjoyed the intimate co-operation and profound respect of the press and its workers.

It was characteristic of the Globe business offices to have Mr. Jordan's unfailing pleasantness and personal chats make the caller perfectly at home, and even those who worked side by side with him never found him in ill humor. His death will therefore mean more to many than the mere passing of a worthy citizen.

The surviving family, beside his wife, daughter of the late Charles J. Henderson, are three sons and a daughter. The sons are Lieut. Coleman Jordan, still known as "missing" in the casualty lists—which was a great source of distress to his father—Jack Jordan, with the northern Russia expeditionary forces, Charles, a high school graduate, at home and France, the only daughter, also at home. Albert E. Jordan, dry goods merchant, Paradise row, is a brother and sister are Mrs. John T. Burden, Pennville, Ont., Mrs. H. G. Roddie of Redding, Conn., and Miss Katherine, living with her sister in Ontario.

Mr. Jordan was for years the efficient secretary of the Home for Incurables and in that capacity did excellent work of the highest order. He was also secretary of the foundation fund and organization which will in time commence the provision of a home for aged men. He belonged to St. George's Society, a Canadian Club member and a consistent worker and member of Centenary Methodist church.

The sympathies of the community are extended to the stricken family, who are also burdened with the anxieties of Lieutenant Jordan's fate in the war, and to them and the other relatives the public will offer its sincere condolences.

CHARGES AGAINST COMMISSIONER AND POLICE CHIEF

Made Today and Placed in Mayor's Hands With Request for Investigation

Charges against the commissioner of public safety and the chief of police were presented to the mayor this morning by James H. Gosline, president of the force. The charges are in the form of resolutions made before John A. Barry, as a commissioner for taking affidavits, by three former members of the force, William A. Gibbs, Frederick Gaudet and Robert Lindsay. One declarant alleges that he had caught pigeons in the belfry with the aid of other policemen and taken them to the chief's home, and that he had brought in the night sergeant to play checkers with the chief. Another declares that he worked on the chief's farm during his holidays receiving an extra dollar a day for his work, and another that he had refused a similar offer made by the desk man and had enjoyed no holidays that year.

The only charge against the commissioner is one of interference with regard to a prisoner who was released from cells in the middle of the night by his order. In presenting the charges to the mayor, Mr. Gosline informed his worship that there were other charges to be made and asked that those preferred today be made the basis of an investigation into police matters generally at which investigation other evidence relating to the department would be brought in.

The charges made are of a somewhat trifling nature.

TODAY OF HERBERT R. MATHEWSON OF THE C.P.R.

This afternoon, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rathburn of Rosedale, Miss Ina, in marriage to Herbert R. Mathewson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Mathewson of Hamilton, Ont., and traveling passenger agent of the C. P. R. on this division. The happy wedding ceremony took place in the tastefully decorated parlor and was performed by Rev. Canon Daniel in the presence of relatives and a few intimate friends.

Miss Rathburn wears a becoming traveling suit of navy blue, black velvet hat with white osprey, and seal furs. She carried a beautiful bouquet of Ophelia roses. Mr. and Mrs. Mathewson will spend their honeymoon visiting Montreal and Toronto, spend Christmas with the groom's family in Hamilton and then visit Buffalo and Niagara, returning to St. John in about three weeks.

THE FREDERICTON CHILDREN'S AID

The Children's Aid Society of Fredericton during the last year expended $2,527.84, of which $1,452.62 was for upkeep of its home.

The report of Miss Jean Cooper, agent for the society, shows splendid work done. The children who have been given attention range in years from one and a half to fourteen years. At the beginning of the year there were seven children in the care of the society, and the society has had as high as thirty-six. Thirteen children were taken on account of the serious illness of their mothers. This gave the mothers a chance to regain their strength by taking treatment at hospitals. Five children were cared for while the mothers were in jail and the father in France. They were kept until such a time as the home from which they came was made fit to live in. Seven were taken from foster homes because of ill-treatment or because they did not appear to fit into their surroundings. Altogether twenty-nine children were reported to have been taken care of this year. Of this number, thirteen were returned to their parents, and eight were returned when the mothers were naturally upon such short personal acquaintance was not very familiar with them at the time of her death. Word of Miss Jenner's death came as a severe shock to a circle of intimate friends and companions in this city, also in other maritime provincial places where her father has filled pastures. Previous to coming to St. John she trained and practiced in Winnipeg. She nursed several cases in this city in 1917 and this year.

THE LATE NURSING SISTER JENNER

Rev. J. H. Jenner, of the West St. John Baptist church, who was in Toronto with a detachment of soldiers when the cables announced the death of his daughter, Nursing Sister Lenna M. Jenner, in England yesterday, is expected home today. It is not known yet whether Miss Jenner's body will be brought across the ocean for interment or not. This will largely depend upon her parents and also upon the regulations governing such cases, especially among men and women in the king's uniform. Miss Jenner has relatives in Sussex, England, families of her own name and others by the name of Burroughs. She had visited them previous to her illness, but naturally upon such short personal acquaintance was not very familiar with them at the time of her death. Word of Miss Jenner's death came as a severe shock to a circle of intimate friends and companions in this city, also in other maritime provincial places where her father has filled pastures. Previous to coming to St. John she trained and practiced in Winnipeg. She nursed several cases in this city in 1917 and this year.
