THE LATE MRS. JOHN JACKSON

The funeral of Mrs. John Jackson, held on Saturday afternoon from her late residence, 80 Dochter street, was a striking tribute to the esteem in which she was held and in the deep sympathy felt for Mr. Jackson in the loss of his life partner of forty-two years and for the children in the passing away of a devoted mother. Many friends gathered at the bereaved home for the funeral services, which were conducted by Rev. D. H. McPherson of the Central Baptist Church. Despite the rain a large number walked in the funeral procession which was taken for Fernhill. At the graveside also service was conducted by Rev. Mr. McPherson.

Mrs. Jackson had realized for some days that the parting hour was soon to come but she was fully resigned in peace and in the knowledge that in her life work she had done her best. She rests beneath a covering of beautiful flowers sent in profusion by sympathizing friends despite the fact that it had been a request that none be sent.

ON THE RIVER

Great Crowd at Brown's Flat Potatoes in Blossom—The Yachtsmen

Saturday's steamer took many people up the river. The closing of the school enabled families to move out to river homes for the holidays, and there were more week-end excursionists than on any previous Saturday. Brown's Flat was a favorite with the latter, as the camp meetings are in progress. An enormous crowd was there yesterday, and many motor boats and canoes were about the place. The day was fine and cool. The morning the Onceps made an early morning trip and brought a very large lot of passengers back to the city.

A dance in the pavilion at the Landing on Saturday evening was enjoyed by almost as many dancers as could move comfortably on the floor, some arriving in cars for the evening.

The rain on Friday was of very great benefit to the crops. One sees potatoes and peas in blossom, people have their own lettuce and radishes at table, and strawberries sold at the Landing Saturday at twenty-five cents a box.

There were many sailing yachts out on Saturday afternoon. As the Onceps passed through Grand Bay three were coming out of the Kennebecasis in a spanking breeze, heeled over in the manner the yachtsmen loves. There is evidently to be more yachting this summer than for some years. The novelty of the motor boat has worn off for many who love the water, and though their numbers increase the sailing yacht has by no means lost its charm. For the next two months the life of the river will be full tide, and they are fortunate who can share in its charms.

THE CITY AND THE SOLDIERS

Commissioner Thornton said that with permission of the council he had employed Cecil McLean but the Storm case had not been brought to his attention before.

The mayor said that he thought it had been the policy of the departments to employ returned men if a man returning was not physically fit to resume his old occupation it was the intention of the city to place him in some other position if possible.

Mr. Brown suggested that if there were no vacancies for a man, some provision should be made for him.

Commissioner Bullock said that the city ought to live up to its promises and take on the returned men even if there was no place for them. He said that it was a disgraceful truth that there were employers in the city who would make no promise to men stating that they wouldn't get their positions back.

Commissioner Jones said that he had applications for employment but they were chiefly of a clerical nature.

Mr. McLean said the delegation did not come to make complaint but chiefly to obtain a pronouncement of policy and to co-operate with the city in this regard. It was desired that the business men of the city use the labor bureau when requiring men for work.

Mr. Yassie asked if the council could put themselves on record as to the policy they would follow.

Commissioner Fisher said that the public works department had employed so far as possible all returned men. Commissioners Thornton and Jones also spoke along the same lines. Commissioner Jones said with the assistance of the council he hoped to throw open some work that would absorb a great many of the returned men.

The following resolution moved by Commissioner Bullock was carried unanimously:

"Moved that it is the policy of this council that men who were on the payroll of the city at the time of enlistment in the recent war on their return and reporting for work be reinstated or placed in an equally good position as at the time of enlistment and further that returned men be given the preference in any positions which the city may have open.

The delegation expressed appreciation of the action of the council and withdrew.
