Sworn Statement BOSTON POLICE OFFICER

H. R. STRYENS:

Dear Sir,—From exposure, I took sick about nine years ago with Rhoumatic Fever, from which I suffered about four months. When I recovered from the fever I found myself suffering with pain in my side and constipation, which brought on the piles. I consulted a physician, and paid him over $200 for attending me, and all the while I was gradually growing worse. Then one physician after another was employed, until seven of the best physicians of Boston had taken my case in hand.

later another was employed, until seven of the leading physicians of Boston had taken my case in hand.

On consultation between several of the leading physicians, they concluded my complaint was asthma and general debtlity. I had great difficulty in breathing and an inhaler was required to afford me breath. Through the treatment of one physician I took from 75 to .100 boxes of calomen phils, and fatterly refer all the medicine that each phe vast amount of medicine paed to get control to the second part of the second part

VEGETINE.

FACTS WILL TELL.

GOPPSTOWN, N. H., Aug. 1, 1875.
STEVENS, Esq. :-H. R. Stevens, Esq. :—

Dear Sir.—Allow me to say a word in favor of Vegetine. During the past year I have suffered from a complication of discesses. I lay in bed from the 3d of November until the middle of the following June, and on an average did not sit up two hours a week; I had eight of the best physicians in the state, but got no help, and constantly grew worse. They agreed that I had heart disease, phthisis, pyaemia, and kidney complaint, and could never be any better. I was reduced in weight 50 pounds, which is much, for I am naturally thm. In June, finding I was failing under the treatment of the physicians, I commenced the use of Vegetine frough the earnest persuasion of friends, and, I am happy to state, with good results. I have gained ten pounds in weight, and can sit up all day, walk half a mile and ride six.

I am greatly encouraged, and shall continue using the Vegetines fi I can get it. I sm a poor man, but for the truth of this statement I refer to any man in Goffstown or vicinity.

Your, very thankfully,

A. J. BURBECK.

My given name, kind sir, is John Hilyard; but I have been called 'Mate Jack' ever since I was drawn by my love for the deep blue sea to enter upon a sailor's life. I was eighteen when I first went on ship-board, and for ten years I staid on the Echo, cheerfully fulfilling my duties and obeying my superior officers. I had little education or knowledge of religion, having never known a parent's eare; but to be on the sea, to lie in my berth and hear the waves swish with their long, regular the fly, the little black fly— ke the horse in the story, he's "small, but O, my! litting about in his maddening fun, e sucketh the blood of every one. the waves swish with their long, regular motion against the ship's side was worth more than books or learning to

The Britannia was a trader, and had already been twice on trader, and had already been twice on a profitable voyage to the Upper Guinea coast, and was fitting out for a third trip when I joined her crew. They were glad to get me—I was strong and ablebodied then. The day came that we sailed; and a dark, stormy one it was. The wind blew a stiff gale before was. The wind blew a stiff gale before we had weighed anchor many hours. We were flying busily about obeying the captain's orders, when suddenly a small lad appeared in our nidst. We all gazed at him in astonishment, while with an angry look the captain seized him by his collar.

"A "stowaway!" What are you doing here!"

doing here!'
"The youngster, who couldn't have been more than twelve, bore his shaking with sturdy equanimity, and when he got the chance he took off his ragged cap to his rough interlocutor.

"Please, sir, don't be angry,' he said. 'haven't any father or mother, and I want to be a sailor.'

"The captain looked surprised at his coolness; then a sense of humor struck him and he lost his gruffress in a laugh.

him and he lost his gruffness in a laugh, he exclaimed:
"'Well, in truth, your're a cool one!" "That was the way I first met 'Stow-way Ned,' as we called him. He it was who showed me that above the blue was who showed me that above the blue sea, whose every aspect I knew so well, was One whose power ruled the waves and stilled the highest storms. 'Stowaway Ned's' history was little enough to tell. Brought up by a poor but pious mother, who had lately died, he had been buffeted since then from corner to corner, until he hid away in our hold with the intention of becoming a sailor. He was a good little fellow; that pious mother's teachings had taken firm root mother's teachings had taken firm root and to him I owe that through all the changes and trials of my life I have had the comfort of knowing and loving that Friend 'unto whom every knee shall bow.'

"We soon grew to be great panions, 'Stowaway Ned' and I, not-withstanding the difference in our ages; and he became a prime favorite with the captain.

"Years ago there was not the facility for trading in barbarous parts that there is now, and great danger attended the adventurous white men, who risked their lives by approaching too near the neighborhood of the coast inhabited by the treacherous blacks. But our trips, which we made year after year, were

"During one of our long stops for repairs in England I met and loved a sweet-faced lassie. She was an orphan, working for her living, and as she made no objections to marry a poor sailor, with 'Stowaway Ned' for a witness, we were joined together. Then after a while the time came for me to go away again, and with tears and kisses we parted—though we little knew it—forever!

"I never saw her dear face again, and never will in this world. The next summer, on my return from my voyage

"Who is Joseph talking so angrily to, Papa ?" the child said as she saw the consequential butler gesticulating very earnestly.

On one of the broad, stone steps sat a gray haired man; but though his clothes were worn and threadbare, they were neat, and it was at once evident he was no beggar. But that was not Joseph's opinion, for in rough tones he was or clandise, and the chief had conceived the idea of capturing the white boy of whose comeliness his subjects had brought such reports.

"Ned had been standing by the rail, when suddenly a lasso, thrown by a skilful hand, had dragged him into the water and directly into a boat which,

Mr. Langley took in the situation at a glance, and silencing his officious servant, he waited to say a few kindly words, such as always came readily to the lips of this prosperous man whom good fortune had not spoiled.

"He looks so tired, papa, why don't you ask him to come in and rest a little while? Poor old man!"

As the sweet voice fell upon his ears the wayfarer, whose head had been bowed in an attitude of intense weariness, suddenly looked up. and in tones in the situation at the wayfarer whose head had been bowed in an attitude of intense weariness, suddenly looked up. and in tones in the situation at skilful hand, had dragged him into the water and directly into a boat which, the water and directly into a boat which, we seel's side for some time. "God bless the kind heart! Those are the first words of cheer an old tarhas heard since he left his native land."

As he spoke, an expression of interest came into Mr. Langley's face, and he said quickly:

"My friend, if they are the first they shall not be the last. As my little girl says, you seem tired; will you not come in and rest awhile?"

Verily the old weather-beaten man, grif says, you seem tired; will you not come in and rest awhile?"

Verily the old weather-beaten man, who had thought himself a few moments before without a friend in the stranger land into which he had but lately come,
