His enterprise was at-mded with results at once ludicrous and strous. He placed ledges here and alorg the back of his stage, and obtaining a parcel of nine-pound cannon-balls, packed these in a wheelbarrow, which a carpenter was instructed to wheel to and fro over the ledges. The play was 'King Lear;' and the jolting of the heavy barrow, as it was trundled along its uneven path over the hollow stage, and the ramblings and reverberations thus produced counterfeited most effectively the raging of the tempest in the third act. Unfortunately while the King was braving, in front of the scene, the pitiless storm at the back, the carpenter missed his footing tripped over one of the ledges, and tell down. wheelbarrow, cannon-balls, and all. The stage being on a declivity, the cannon-balls came rolling rapidly and noisily down towards the front, gathering force as they advanced, and, overcoming the teeble resistance offered by the scene, struck it down, passed over its pros-trate form, and made their way towards the tootlights and the fiddler, admidst the amusement and sharm of the Lear of the night. As the nine pounders ad-wanced towards him, and rolled about in all directions, he was compelled to display an activity in avoiding them singularly inappropriate to the age and condition of the character he was personsting. He was even said to resemble a dancer achieving the terpsichorean feat known as the egg-hornpip3. Persently, too the music-ians became alarmed for the safety of themselves and their instruments, and deemed it advisable to scale the spiked partition which divided them from the pit; for the cannon-balls were came rolling rapidly and noisily down the spiked partition which divided them from the pit; for the cannon-balls were upod them, smashing the lamps, and tall-ing heavily into the orohestra. After this unlucky experi-ment, the manager abanConed his wheel-barrow and cannon balls, and reverted to more received methods of producing stage storms."

AN UNHAPPY DUCHESS. Ccelly of York, Mother of two Kings-

Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.' It lay uneasily in Shakespeare's time, and before his time, if history tells the truth; probably it lies uneasily even now. But it wasn't only the actual head which wore a crown that was uncasy in time past ; the head which came too near to wearing a crown had its own sorrows. The Wars of the Roses wiped out most of the nobility of England, though the plain people suffered little; and many well-born others mourned husbands and sons slain in the wars. But fews, if any of them, had

Oa May 4, 1471 the baths of Tewnesbury was tought and immediately afterward Elward, Prince of Wales, who, though a Lancastrian, had married the duchees's neice, the King Maker's daughter Anne was murdered by her some, the Duke of Clarence and Gloa-cester. They kept the killing in the timily, but it was killing just the same. Two years later, so that the Duchees should not get unaccustomed to grief, her som.in-law, Thomas Holland, Dake of Ex-eter, who had had to beg his bread in exile, was found dead on the seashore at Dover, and in 1478 her son, the Dake of Clarence was drowned in a butt of Malm-sey, his wife Cecily having been poisoned previously; her son.in-law, Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, had tean killed in 1477. Then there was a little respits for the poor Duchess. In 1483 died her son, Edward IV, only 41 years old, the first one of her descendants to die a natural death sunce 1455—twenty eight years. In the same year her two grandsons, Edward V. and Richard, Duke of York, were murder-ed by their uncle and her son, Richard, Duke of Gloucester, who became King as Richard III. and in his turn was killed at Basworth Field on Aug. 22, 1485, when only 30 years old. Her son-in-law Sir. Thomas St. Leger, was executed in 1483; and a grandenphew, a second Henry-Stai-ford. Duke of Backingham, was executed in 1487. Except for a few small deaths, such as two husbands of a nicce. Cathern Nevil, and a grander, Edward, Prince of Wales, the Duchess lost no more relatives, and died peaceluly in 1495. All but the Prince of Wales, of there iour, died by violnce. Of her children, margaret, Duchess of Bargundy, was the only one who survived her. During the forty years 1455-35, she had seen twenty-five of her relatives die by violnce and three by disease. But she beselt did not rest even after death. When Henry VIII. dest

Legion. Don't dally with heart disorders. There is but one cure. "I had been for a num-ber of years sorely a flitted with heart dis-erse. At times my lite was despaired of. Doctors had prescribed, and I had taken every known heart remedy made, I had tupposed, and did not get any benefit. I read of the wonderful cures wrought by Dr Agnew's Cure for the Heart. I procured a bottle, and in less time almost than it takes to tell it, the distress was relieved. I followed the directions closely and today I am a well woman again, and I shall do all in my power to make known to every one suffering as I did the wondertul cure it worked for me. Mrs. Wm. such a succession of sorrows as one who might have seemed born only to enjoy the days of her life-Cecily, wite of Richard Plantagenet, Duke of York, and leader of the White Rose. Cecily Nevil was granddaughter of 'Old

John of Gaunt,' time-honored Lancaster, and so great-grand daughter of King Edward III.; her father was Ralph Nevil, Earl of Westmorland, her mother Joan Beaufort, the Duke of Larcaster's daughter. Cecily Nevil married Richard Plantagenet when she was about twenty years old, in 1440; and they had four sons and two daughters, Edward, Edmund, George, Richard, Anne, and Margaret. For fifteen years no especial sorrows reached her; her sons were strong, her husband was the principal subject in the kingdom.

But in 1455 the Wars of the Roses began with the bloody battle at St. Alban's on May 23, and the Earl of Stafford, the nephew of Duchess Cecily was killed there. At Northampton, on July 10, 1460, her brother-in-law, Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, was killed; and the terrible fight at Wakefield on Dec. 30, 1460, robbed her at once of two nephews, a brother, a son, and a husband. In the battle fell Sir Thomas Nevil and Sir Edmund Bourchier, nephews, and her husband, Richard. Immediately after the battle her brother Ralph, Earl of Salisbury, was executed, and her son Edmond, Earl of Rutland, only 12 years old, was murdered by John Lord Clifford, in cold blocd, in revenge for the death of his father in battle."

When sorrows came to Duchess Cecily, they did not come slone. Another nephew, Sir John Nevil, fell at Towton, March 29,
