The dining table was decorated with a large birthday cake, decorated in red and white, and encircled by a wreath of twelve red roses, intermingled with green, while twelve red candles in red rose holders were placed around the cake. Favors of confections fashioned in formal design representing large bouquets were beside each place card and added much to the appearance of the decorated birthday table. During the supper hour, the lights of the electric were turned off, and the guests were entertained with a variety of already bright and happy countenances of the youths and maidens, making a striking picture. After supper the guests repaired to the drawing-room, where a large number of parcels were unwrapped and after all were sealed round the honored young maiden, proceeded to remove the wrappings from the mysterious parcels, each revealing a pretty gift with suitable inscriptions and was the source of much merriment. Games were next in order including Bagatelle, and other games which required thought and resourcefulness. The winning prizes were won by the Misses Hazel Parlee, Elsie Northrup and Gordon Jones. Later in the evening ice cream and confections were served, after which the youths and girls were escorted to their homes.
