Sir Wilfrid Laurier at London.

(H. F. Gadsby, in Toronto Saturday Night).

Sir Wilfrid gave his hearers, not perhaps one of his best speeches—I have heard him soar higher—but a fairly satisfactory performance. As the Globe would say, it had the meat of the word in it—some strong stuff for everybody—thrusts at the tariff, at extravagance, at patronage, at Bob Rogers, at Lionel Curtis' $40,000,000 a year brand of imperialism and so on, in short the usual food of declamation properly spiced with wit and satire.

But it was when Sir Wilfrid talked about the war and its objects and consequences that he wrought his greatest spell. His words have all the weight that old age and a comprehensive experience of life can lend them. His charm is of a more specious period when men like Burke and Fox and Pitt endowed political utterance with breadth and dignity. In choice, Sir Wilfrid is just a bit old worldish and this gives flavor to his eloquence. Wherefor Sir Wilfrid coins a metaphor if is Virgilian—it marches with banners. A great subject like war befits this majesty of speech. Sir Wilfrid speaks of war like an Old Testament prophet. When he speaks of peace one thinks of sunsets and benedictions.

All of which is to say that the last part of Sir Wilfrid's speech was the best—the part that walked among the great emotions and touched there responsive chords. For instance, Sir Wilfrid is a pacifist, but a pacifist who would beat Germany to her knees so that peace may be assured. Sir Wilfrid is also a British Liberal and all he asks of Great Britain is that she remain true to her glorious past—including, no doubt, that policy of free trade for which Sir Wilfrid won the Cobden medal. Win the war, says Sir Wilfrid, but when the war is over let the better angels guide our course. Sir Wilfrid's idea of course is that the Liberal angels are better than the Conservative angels, but that is a matter of taste.

Personally I lean to the Liberal angels—as some may have suspected from my writings—but I don't want my angels too good. All ... is to attend to business, ... ing" they do the better ... pre- ...luded that ... eral ... ty feel ... want ... d go

ANNUAL MEETING OF GOVERNORS OF KING'S COLLEGE

Halifax, Nov. 8—At the annual meeting of the board of governors of King's College, held here, nearly all members were in attendance including Bishop Richardson. Reports of different committees showed a very satisfactory state of affairs. The number of students is, of course, reduced, but the work of the college is being pursued as usual and the financial situation was considered quite satisfactory.

The endowment fund showed an increase of about $9,000 and visitors' fund an increase of a little more than $1,000. A deficit was carried forward, but this was to be expected owing to war conditions. Permission was given to the military authorities to use part of the college building as a hospital during the winter.

There was discussion as to the advisability of undertaking a new canvas for the endowment fund, generally thought in view of probable expansion of the college work, it would be well to undertake such a campaign in the near future.

The question of a standard matriculation for all the colleges was referred to a special committee. The board adjourned to meet again on Dec. 19.

TO SELL LUMBER PROPERTY

Saturday, Nov. 4.

The creditors of the T. B. Calhoun Lumber Company met yesterday at the office of J. F. H. Teed, the assignee, and made arrangements for the disposal of the property. T. H. Somerville and H. J. White, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Moncton, were appointed inspectors.

The assignee was instructed to sell the stock, machinery and crop at Beaver Brook, Albert county, by public auction, and to dispose of the same kind of property at Calhoun's by private contract at not less than $2,000, or by public auction. The disposal of other property was left to the inspectors and the assignee. The creditors adjourned until 11.30 o'clock, Dec. 15.

The liabilities of the company are understood to be about $55,000, and the assets, nominally $45,000. The heaviest creditor is the J. E. Moore Company, about $25,000 partly secured.

$40,000 VISI...

Truro, N. S., Nov. 8—Fire today broke out in the Kemp building, and before it could be controlled the upper story had been destroyed, together with the contents of the building as a whole.

It was occupied by the following: F. C. Layton, dry goods; A. G. Blonquist, tailor; Allan McLellan, tailor; the Rogers Novelty Company; Professor Willard's Music Studio; Dr. Daniel and Dr. Randall, dentists. The total loss will exceed $40,000, the total insurance being $20,000. The origin of the fire is unknown. No lives were lost and no one was injured.

WINS MILITARY MEDAL.

A despatch from Danville, Quebec, says: Lieut. M. McCracken, who is a member of an engineer corps "somewhere in France," has been awarded a military medal for bravery on the battlefield. Lieut. McCracken enlisted in Ottawa as a private. He gained promotion first as lance-corpora, then corporal, sergeant and finally was given a commission as lieutenant, which rank he now holds. This is the second Danville boy who has been honored by his king, the other being Harry Gifford, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Gifford, who won the D. S. O. medal on the battlefield. Mr. Gifford has been granted leave of absence and is now on his way home.
