

I asked about the meeting at Thurston, he says your folks says they were A.N.O.1. that you made a cracking good speech, that you are a cracker as a speaker. The more you talk, the better they like you. They all like you. I asked if he thought me would win and he said I am pretty sure you are. I spoke about the future of the United States, he said the cream of the wheat is yet to come, they must have the chaff first. They are in a corner, things are well settled, they are coming ~~down~~ our way by degrees the millionaire is cut-up to death in the hands of the people he is rough with those who don't agree with him. We have all talked a lot about this. Stand ^{four} square, there will soon be a feather in your bonnet. Keep placed through everything what you do this summer most splendid, it will do a lot of good, though you did not have part in the conference. You held your own in a dignified way, and there was a look in your eye that those who passed by saw and carried away. It was never passed, a smile comes to you from the land from afar they remember you. Remember not a calling of demon- stration or of families - it is all the people under the canopy of heaven, peace, harmony, and good will. You have conquered the big 'I' that enemy of yours, he thinks you have recently put a nail in his coffin. I asked if or what thought he was going to get married. It would do him any good if he does is. You may be sure if he does he wouldn't marry any one who hadn't money. He will not be so happy in the end as you - But your right foot forward, and march on, take up the cause of the masses, hidden for them the right of way, that is the battle of liberation.

Was his grandfather there, yet he was here this morning, he like your brother has a word, he made way for him he is a fine statesman, but feels very sore ^{the way things} are going in England. You are a good fellow. It is well that and for both are admirers, and you are good to the laborer speak to them out of the work. With the heart of the multitude
