such a situation for an intelligent presidentes and officials of the puebwoman in a great city, full of interesting and desirable and necessary things to do, but I must take my correspondent's statement as a fact, and deal with it as such.

She says : "Will I be benefited by joining a woman's club ? My husband complains of my being blue and morbid, and of taking life too seria bad rut, useless to myself and my friends. Any advice in your valuable column will be duly appreciated as to the best use to put my time and bring cheerfulness into my home. My husband does not care to go out at all, but is willing I should."

When a girl of twenty marries a man of forty she rarely thinks ten years or twenty years in advance. Men are more attractive at forty, as a rule, than at an earlier age but the average American begins to "settle down at fifty, and finds his whole happiness at Hus own fireside. This is either because he has worn out all the pleasures of the outside world or because he has never learn-an accomplishment, to be learned by that the average American woman craves social distraction from thirty to sixty far more than she does in her teens, unless she has an interest-

I, think this is due to the ever unappeased love of romance in woman's nature. Most men outlive that sentiment, and are satisfied with the comforts of life
