DUDLEY CARLEON

BY MISS M. E. BRADDON.

CHAPTER VII.

Jenny's eyes wandered involuntarily to the portrait of Martin Carleon.

'Is there any fever?' she asked, looking up anxiously at the surgeon's face, as he stood before her, with his fingers on her wrist

'Why—yes. I think there is a little,' he said, with some hesitation.

Her face grew suddenly white; she rose from her chair, and seemed as if she was going to run out of the room. Ralph, the bailiff, on his knees at the threshold of the half-open door, rattled away at the lock he was mending. Kneeling where he did he seemed to present an impassable barrier between the mistress of the Grey Farm and the world without.

Dudley Carleon dropped the newspaper, as he started to his feet.

'Jenny! Jenny! what is the matter with you?'

'I want to get out of the house,' she said, looking about her wildly; 'I want to run away I know that if I stay here I shall die as he did.'

She pointed to Martin's picture on the wall before her.

'Jenny Carleon!'

'Oh, forgive me! forgive me, Dudley!' she said, throwing herself into her husband's arms, and sobbing hysterically; 'I do not doubt you — I esteem, respect, and love you. I know how foolish I am, and hate myself for my folly; but I am frightened!—I am frightened!'

In spite of the doctor's attention, in spite of her own care, Jenny Carleon did not regain her health. She felt herself gradually growing weaker; she felt that, by such low degrees as were almost imperceptible, her strength was ebbing away from her. It was only by looking back at the end of a week, and remembering that seven days before she had been able to do that, which she was utterly powerless to do now, that she discovered how she had changed. She had struggled hard against this daily diminution of her strength, for she seemed to have a strange horror of being confined to her room; but she succumbed at last, and kept her bed day after day. A good-tempered maid-servant waited upon her, and brought her her medicines, which she poured out herself.

Her husband came into the room several times a day to ask after her health. He brought her piles of novels obtained for her from a circulating library in the market town; but he still appeared to attach little importance to her illness and was so occupied about the farm that he could seldom stay with her for any length of time

She used to ask every morning whether Ralph, the bailiff, was going away that day, always to be told that he was not; but that he would leave in a day or two, at the latest. Once after having received this answer, she turned her head round impatiently upon her pillow, and, with her face to the wall burst out crying.

'Jenny, what is the matter with you?' asked her husband

She did not answer; but she could see that her delicate frame was shaken by her sobs.

'Jenny, I insist upon knowing the meaning of this!'

She lifted her head from the pillow, supported herself upon her elbow, and, putting her hair away from her tear-stained face, said to him solemnly:

'Dudley Carleon, the presence of that man is killing me, day by day, hour by hour. Shut up in this room, I cannot see him; but I can feel and know that an unseen influence is sapping my very life, and that influence is his. If you are not his slave, if you are not bound to him by some tie too fearful to be broken, send him from this house; or, if I have strength to crawl out of it, I will go myself.'

'Jenny, Jenny, this is an invalid's fancy. Don't give me reason to think you are as mad as Agnes Marlow.'

'Dudley Carleon, will you send that man away?'

'Since you are so silly, yes. He shall go tonight.'

She held out her wasted little hand to him with a smile. 'Do this Dudley,' she said, 'and I shall think that you love me.'

Something in the tone of her voice, in the sad but gentle expression of her face, touched his reserved and undemonstrative nature. Dudley Carleon clasped her suddenly to his heart, and his face upon her shoulder, sobbed aloud.

'Oh, my poor little wife,' he said, 'what is to become of us?'

'Dudley, Dudley! don't cry. You terrify—you grieve me!'

He rose from his seat by the bedside, and brushed the tears from his eyes.

'I am a fool, Jenny; for I distress you and myself. But make your mind easy: Ralph shall go to-night! As there is a heaven above us, he shall go to-night!'

To be Continued.

Now come and tell me, dearie, what was the most interesting thing in the sermon this morning?' Why mamma, it was where the minister told about taking somebody else apart; but he didn't tell how it was done or how he was put together again.'

If you are bilious, take Dr. Pierce's 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets,' the original 'Little Liver Pills.' Of all druggists.

An Indian chief who was visiting at Washington at government expense was introduced to a senator recently, who has a very bald head. The chief looked at him some moments with great interest. Finally he said: 'Ugh! Where you fight Injun some time?'

Young and middle-aged men, suffering from nervous debility and kindred affections, as loss of memory and hypochondria, should enclose 10 cents in stamps for large illustrated treatise suggesting sure means of cure. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N.Y.

A little "fresh-air-child" at Elland, who had never seen a cow before was watching the milking process with eyes full of astonishment. After looking on in silence for some time she drew near, and placing her hand on the cow's distended side, she exclaimed: 'Why, she's chalk full of it, ain't she?'

How Lost How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness Involuntary Seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc; also Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence, or sexual extravagance, &c

The celebrated author, in his admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

"Cheap Drugs are the dearest things on Earth."

The Advantages of Horse's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil.

It is believed that the not unfrequent and discouraging failures of plain Cod Liver Oil and other tonic and alterative treatment to cure consumption, grow out of the fact that they leave no positive power to arrest the decay of the lungs; that while Cod Liver Oil supplies the waste of adipose tissue and vitalizes that the disease has made, as no other known substance can, it does not exercise any controlling power over the disease itself; it only gives Nature a fair chance to work her own cure. Something more is wanted — SOMETHING TO ARREST THE DECAY THAT DESTROYS LIFE —some prompt remedial agent that shall act directly upon the disease to check it while the Cod Liver Oil is building up the system. This important addition we have in Horse's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil. The power of Carbolic Acid — to arrest decay is something marvelous The destruction of matter cannot proceed where it is administered. Its disinfectant, purifying and cleansing properties are truly remarkable, and have been of the greatest practical value to medical men.
