ALD. FINDLAY

Told Civic Union Members Why He Should be Mayor

NO CORRUPTION IN COUNCIL

He Refers to the Hendrie Railway Interests and Scores J. J. Scott-Alleges That Ald. TenEyck

Both political parties continually promised the workingman a fulf dinner pail, as though that were the chief end of man; the horses, cattle and even the logs got as much. The socialists would help them to get above the level of the brute creation by securing to labor a greater share of the good things of this world. His held that neither the Grit nor the Tory party had ever done anything for the working classes, and that even the labor unions were always under the leadership of men who were on the look out for political jobs. Mr. Barrett continued in this strain

Mayor's chair for the year 1901.

Favors Unions.

Ald. Findlay was given a cordial reception from the commencement of his address. Referring to some of the previous speaker's statements he expressed the opinion that it would not be a bad idea if the 'powers that be' distributed a few more jobs than they did among the workingmen. They were certainly better qualified to know what the working classes needed in the administration of the country's affairs than most of the men who got political appointments. Personally, the speaker said he was a strong believer in trades unionism as the lever by which the condition of the working classes would be steadily haproved. Union had done much for all trades in Hamilton, and he hoped to see it do more as the years went by. (Applause.) He took exception to the Tremark of Mr. Barrett at the nominations on Monday, to the effect that all the aid-ermén this year were corrupt, and ought to be bundled out of the Council. Ald, Findlay knew of no corruption in the Council during the four years he had been a member of it. He had always thought that there was

Board of Works last year, he had pledged himself to let the civic salary question alone during the year. All the time he had been in the Council he had advocated the doing of city work by day labor. While he had been Chairman of the Board of Works that had been the system in vogue, and he did not think his successors in office would care to change it. He also claimed credit for securing the abolition of the old system of paying men working in the city quarries with orders for greeerles, coal, wood, etc. Under his regime these men were not only paid in cash, but they now received $1.75 in money for the same amount of labor that they formerly received only $1.25 worth of supplies for. He had also induced the Council to keep the quarries open all winter, thus insuring unskilled labor steady employment at a season when it was most needed.

The speaker then paid his respects to Ald. Ten Eyck, alleging that that gentleman had deliberately shirked his responsibility on the vote on the question of salary reduction when it came up in the Council and later had raised a point of order which the Mayor and the City Solicitor, the latter one of the officials most seriously affected by the proposed cuts, speedily found to be well taken. (Laughter) Not many years ago, Ald. Ten Eyck had persistently opposed the union label being placed on city goods. Now he was careful to have it on his election cards.

Roasting the Major.

Roasting the Major.

Referring to his other opponent, Major John S. Hendrie, Ald. Findlay said that that gentleman had never taken any interest before in municipal affairs, his only experience as a public man being gained as commanding officer of artillery, a position which he could only secure through wealth and family infinance. The Major's predecessor in the race, Ald. Walker, had retired at the earnest solicitation of J. J. Scott, Q.C., Ald. Dunn and one or two other Tories, who impressed Ald. Walker with the idea that Hamiton needed a Mayor who could receive Royalty, and on being assured that he would get back all the money lie had already spent in election expenses, he gracefully withdrew from the contest. Ald. Findlay did not know of any special apualification which Mr. Scott had to select a candidate for Mayor, and he proceeded to score Mr. Scott severely for escaping taxation on his lands in the east end, and also referred to his being forsaken by his law partners. The attacks in the Post, Mr. Scott's paper, on the present administration of civic affairs, had been prompted, in the speaker's opinion, by the fact that the aldermen who were now being attacked had refused to legislate for the personal aggrandisement of Mr. Scott, in that they declined to yote money to imprave his large property holdings.

* About the Grand Trunk.

Alleges That Ald. TenEyck Shirked Issue in the Fight for Reduction of City Hall Salaries.

Mayoralty candidates had an opportunity to address a mass meeting of the electors on the issues of the present campaign at a meeting of the Hamilton Civic Employees' Union, held in the union's hall, on MacNab street north, last evening. The hall was about half filled with members of the union and their friends, but the only candidates to put in an appearance were Ald. Findlay and Wm. Barrett. President Haddow was in the chair, and all the speakers were given a good hearing.

Mar. Barrett was the first candidate to take the platform, and he proceeded to explain some of the principles of the Socialistic-Labor party, of which he is the standard bearer in the present campaign, alleging that it was the only party that could truthfully claim, to be the real friend of the laboring classes. Both political parties continually promised the workingman a fulf duner pail, as though that were the chief end of man; the horses, cattle and even the love's of the good things of this world. His held that neither the Grit nor the love's next was party had even done during the large amount of extra and locate and proportation, as against $59,000 of a generation by securing to labor a greater shire of the good things of this world. His held that neither the Grit nor the love's next had even done anything. Clark and James Handock in support to labor a greater shire of the good things of this world.

allowed it when Ald. Dunn was chairman.

Speeches were also made by Norman Clark and James Hancock in support of Ald. Findlay for Mayor. Both speakers referred to his consistent course as a friend of labor, and especially to his work in securing better wages and shorter hours for the men at the city quarries, the sewage disposal works and those employed on the streets.

Ald. Nelligan spoke briefly about his own record, and stated among other things that the Kinrade avenus sewer,

Marshall, of Ancaster. Here, beneath an elegant arch of beautiful design, she was given away to Robert M. Lampman, the bridegroom, in the presence of nearly seventy-five relatives and friends. The bride was charmingly attired in white organdic, and carried a large boquet of bridal roses. Miss Mabei R. Wallace, of Toronto, discharged the duties of bridal roses. Miss Mabei R. Numerous well selected and costly presents attested to the high esteem in which the bride and groom are held. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. J. H. Colling, of Ancaster. The bridal party left the Gables about five o'clock, amidst showers of rice and followed by the good wishes and earnest prayers of loving friends. The wedding trip includes a tour through execution.
