CAN THE LABOR DEADLOCK BE LIFTED?

In a single issue of a metropolitan paper, I note these items: The Canadian Vickers Shipbuilding plant at Montreal will close until labor costs are on a basis which will permit the building of ships in competition with other countries. The Presbyterian Theological College at Saskatoon has decided not to proceed with the new buildings as the lowest tenders were far in excess of the college's ability to pay. From Hamilton comes the third item, to the effect that the building trades in that city will not accept any wage cuts this year.

It is all too apparent that we have reached a deadlock. Instances such as quoted above could be multiplied thousands of times over and still be well within the facts. The question is, what are we going to do about it? Business men who should know, estimate that Canada today requires no less than a hundred million dollars worth of buildings of one kind or another, mainly dwellings, and still there is no move to supply the demand.

Under existing conditions, capital cannot be found to proceed with the necessary work. A. wants a house and B. wants to build it. But A. is not prepared to pay $40,000 for what a few years ago he could build for $20,000 or even less. So it is that A. does without the house and B. goes without a job for himself and his men.

The Canadian Vickers Company wants orders for ships, but orders cannot be obtained because prices are higher than trade conditions warrant.

After discussing this situation with a great number of business men, I am firmly of the opinion that the present stalemate can only be overcome by sacrifices on the part of both the workman and employer. In other words, we must have a period of business at cost. It is far better for all concerned to operate plants without profit than not operate at all. And it is far better for a workman to recede from his war scale of wages than not to work at all. And this is exactly the situation as we find it.

This question must, if we are to solve it, be met in a spirit of compromise. And I am sorry to say that a section of the workers are not disposed to view the question in this light.

Quite recently a noisy portion of Toronto out-of-workers held a series of "field days." One man appearing before the Board of Control stated that he, the father of a couple of children, was about to be evicted for non-payment of rent. Thereupon a good-hearted Controller gave him individual cheque for a month's rent and ordered that the man be given a job at the standard wage for labor, $28.80 per week.

"On, rats," remarked the man. "I won't take that, I'm a painter." That man would rather beg than work at anything but his own job at his own price.

Others who appeared in the noisy demonstrations rushed off at the first opportunity to the Labor Bureau and there urged the unemployed to refuse to take jobs on the farm or any other place. For such, and it is to be hoped there are not many, there is but one remedy, and this is hunger. No one is entitled to eat who will not work.

Of course, these people are filled to the brim with a lot of Bolshevik nonsense which gets us nowhere. They believe by some uncanny reasoning, that they are entitled to live on the State. And it is to be feared there will be many a growling stomach before they awake to the truth.—Saturday Night.

THE MORE YOU DO

Did you ever notice, the more you do
The more you are fit to try?
And the harder a fellow climbs a hill,
The easier he goes high?

The harder the job, the firmer the jaw
That's set to the task; there grows
A confidence backing the man who tries,
And the farther ahead he goes.

When a job is easy, one falls asleep—
Is asleep when the game is called;
And the man who could run can hardly creep,
When his engine of luck has stalled.

But the keener the fight when a man runs right,
The easier things come through,
And the easiest job when it's finished is that
Which at first was hardest to do.

The more you do, the harder you hit,
The faster you run, old friend,
Just that much easier is your bit
With a victory at its end.

The world is looking for square-jawed men
And not for the fools that shirk....
We've played long enough with painted toys
For this is The Age of Work!

REMOVE TAX ON FLOUR BRAN AND MIDDINGS

The sales tax of 3 per cent. which has been up to the present, on flour, bran and middlings in any quantities is removed on packages of less than 49 pounds. This will remove a lot of work and worry from the retailers who up to the present have had to make sales tax returns.

On the other hand it is understood that the sales tax on lumber has been raised from one per cent. to three per cent. and the manufacturer pays the tax to the government, and the three per cent. is added to the price of the lumber to the subsequent dealers. Much work is thus eliminated both for the lumbermen and the customers clerks.

LATEST FROM HIKERS

Up to date Mr. and Mrs. Dill have by far the best record in the hike from Halifax to Vancouver. According to the latest report the Dills were only forty-one miles behind the Behans who have been leading the van for some time. The Behans, however have been 119 days out and the Dills 117 days. Burkman, the lone hiker has been out 127 days and is away behind. The Behans and Dills are now climbing the Rockies.

KIND WORD FOR C.N.R. DINING CARS

Gincinnati Man Appreciative of Excellent Attention and Good Menu

Writing to the Superintendent of Dining and Sleeping Car Service of the Canadian National Railways, a prominent business man of Cincinnati has the following words of commendation.

"During the major portion of the past two weeks I have had occasion, with two other friends to spend approximately the most of the time in New Brunswick, Canada, and in so doing had occasion to use your service to a great extent, and I want to congratulate you upon the splendid treatment that our party received at the hands of the employees of the Canadian National Railway, and especially do we want to commend the employees of the Dining Car Service. It was the consensus of the opinions of all of us that we have never been served in such a delightful way or received such good food for the amount of money required to purchase the same."

This party travelled to Quebec via the Canadian National Railways and from there to Fredericton via the Transcontinental line, enjoying an outing on the Cains River.

Fighting In Words

Mr. MacKenzie King, who likes to strike a militant pose in Parliament, is apparently more anxious to fight the Government with adjectives than with ballots. Thus in York-Sunbury, where a contest is in progress, and in Medicine Hat, where a writ for a by-election has just been issued, Mr. King is without candidates. The former riding affords fair fighting ground; the latter has been Liberal since 1911. Yet the Liberal leader, who tries to give the impression that the country is clamoring to make him Prime Minister, is content in both cases to strike his flag to the farmers. It is an ignominious position for the once militant party that fought so brilliantly behind Wilfrid Laurier, and the sad part of it is that under Mr. King, it has become almost chronic. The same refusal to fight took place in Glengarry-Stormont, in Yale, and in Colchester. Mr. King's course, may justify his policy from the standpoint of tactics, but we venture to think that such tactics do not inspire either confidence or enthusiasm. A party that refuses to fight cannot expect to win.

The Spoil of Quebec's Roadside Oven

By courtesy of the C.P.R.
A Quebec Roadside Oven.

No housewife in America is so independent of the price of coal and as the habitant woman of Quebec, with an out-of-door brick oven at her beck and call.

These roadside-ovens, — and nobody knows exactly what whim or fancy possessed the Quebecois mind for carrying his baking apparatus so far from home, unless it was fear of the roaring fire which must be set up in order to bake the large quantity of bread necessary to fill the many mouths of the grande famille,—are not only landmarks in Quebec but indications of the habitant housewife's hospitality. They seem to say to the passer-by, "Now you know you are in Quebec, and Quebec is the land of home-made bread." Mais oui, "Entrez vous. For a mere song Madame will cut you some thick slices and bring out a pitcher of milk." Oui, the grand oven is undoubtedly the symbol of Quebec! There is a friendly look about these old wayside ovens which arises out of the fact that they are made by hand and fit in perfectly with the landscape and the scheme of life in general obtaining in this province, so pre-eminently the land of the home-made.

In many months of tramping in Quebec we have encountered scores of these ovens. But because they are home-made, each one is different. Each architect builds to suit his own fancy or else to come in size the possibilities as to shape and size contained in the material at hand. Leaks are overcome with smudges of plaster and added coats of whitewash, till the oven often resembles a frosted cake. Or else an extra roof is attempted with bits of old board, and then the oven resembles some queer little maison, — a doll's house for the children to play in, or a large kennel for le chien that draws the little cart. Seeing these ovens for the first time you fancy yourself somewhere in the Old-World. But then a similar fancy seizes you about everything in Quebec, which in atmosphere, is all foreign and different. On all occasions, even in the matter of these ovens, Quebec is just herself. It is a Quebec loaf baked here and not the "little bread" of France, nor yet its "yardstick" just a four or five pound loaf that will cut the generous slice that the child at play, or garcon helping with the hay, finds satisfaction in.

These ovens along the Quebec roadside stand for two important factors in our national life. They stand for rural life, for farm life and the development of the country parts. And they stand for family life without which attempts at rural development have proved vain. The women of Quebec are among the most hard working women in Canada, and among the most contented. Given a little house with a curved roof, a tiny balcony and an out-of-door oven by the roadside, your habitant woman asks nothing more of life except a host of children to eat her bread. Every day may be "baking day" for all she cares with grain growing in her own fields, for flour, and an oven of character that can always be stretched to hold another loaf.
