ABOUT SHOES.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

On a shelf in my bedroom sits a pair of shoes. I have had them for a week and I can't bear to wear them. Not because I don't like them, but because I like them so much. They are so immaculate, so unscarred, so trim in their perfect shapeliness.

I love shoes. Don't you? To me there is no other garment that has the fascination, the allure, the rich promise of a pair of new shoes. Perhaps it is because (in my case at least) no other garment has so brief a tenure of newness.

Those Shabby Shoes of Our Childhood. Perhaps it is also because, as a child, my shoes were almost always shabby; for when there are several pairs of small feet to keep decently covered, and means are not unlimited, there must be a limit to the number of shoes per year each pair of feet can have. And, alas, I was, as I so often heard my mother say, "terribly hard on shoes." The shoes that should have looked well for three months were shabby in three weeks, until the time of renewing, the effect of my best frock and prettiest hair ribbon was inevitably marred by the scuffed and scratched shoes in which I ingloriously terminated. I think I conceived a hunger in those days for pretty shoes that I shall still be slaking when I am a very old lady (if that, by any chance, ever happens).

Shoes Are So Wonderful Nowadays. Then again, shoes are such a wonderful thing nowadays. Don't you remember the days when for the average person shoes were either tan or black—usually the latter? And today—well if you are reading your paper on the trolley, glance up and see how many of the feminine shoes ranged opposite you are plain black like the shoes of yesterday. I doubt if there is a woman who reads this who does not own shoes of some other hue. If she has no shoes of bronze or soft grey or brown or any of those delicate confections in the line of shoes that are so fascinating, she has at least a pair of white shoes. And I can remember when the only white shoes were kid slippers and when most people had those only to be married in. Romance in the Shoe Shop. The last time I was fitted to a pair of high shoes I encountered, in my search for just the right pair, a wonderful old gentleman of a shoe clerk. I asked something about the wearing qualities of the shoe and he straightened up and said, "Madame, I have been with this firm forty years and I know there is nothing but good stuff in their shoes." "You must know a great deal about shoes," I said.

A shine of genuine tenderness came into his face. "I love a good shoe," he said. "A fine shoe is as beautiful to me as a yacht or a beautiful woman is to some men."

Now wasn't that a touch of drama to find in a shoe shop?

Household Notes

Mixed vegetables can be canned and they will be very handy in making winter soup.

When remaking wool garments be sure to brush and cleanse the material thoroughly.

Potatoes served as adjuncts to meat and fish neutralize the acids of the protein foods.

Machine stitching with heavy silk makes a pretty trimming for silk blouses or dresses.

Sew a kilted skirt to the little boy's middle to make a good school dress for his sister.

A good rule for salting butter is four level tablespoonsful of salt to one pound of butter.

Put a few cloves into the pan in which prunes are cooking to give them a different flavor.

When making sauces, use cayenne sparingly. It destroys all other flavors and your own taste.

Steam yarn thoroughly while in the tank and garments made from it will not shrink when washed.

Renew the worn chemise by cutting off the upper part at the bust or waist line and add a new top.

LOVE AND SERVICE.

Love is the mother of laughter, and duty is the father of peace. Freedom from care shall come after the roar of the cannon shall cease. You may ponder philosophies many, and follow each thought wave and curve, But this shall outlive each and any: as you love you are willing to serve.

As you love you are willing to labor, as you love you are willing to fight; You will answer the call of a neighbor, no matter the hour of the night. The mother will slave for her baby, the father will sweat for his son; Whatever the grim duty may be, if you love it is cheerfully done.

For all that we strive for and care for, is joy for the ones that we love. Great burdens we readily bear for the lives that we think the most of. Men may brag of their love for Old Glory and pray that its beauty shall live. But the proof of their love is the story of service they cheerfully give.

Love and service are mother and father of all that is splendid and true. Not by words are they mated, but rather by deeds they are willing to do; They toil and they never grow weary, face danger but never they swerve.

This shall prove yours a rich life or dreary—as you love you are willing to serve.

THE MORNING EXERCISE.

Like every other good thing in the world, exercise can be abused or used ignorantly. The first thing we must learn is that the object of any exercise is to send the blood to some particular part of the body. If we exercise the arms we send the blood to them and develop the arm muscles. If we exercise the ankles for suppleness we send the blood to them.

We must not, therefore, steal the blood from any part of the body which needs it in its own work. For instance the stomach is almost the hardest working member of the body, and to do its work well must not be interfered with. After eating, therefore, is no proper time to exercise. Instead, if you can sit in an easy chair and relax for half an hour after each meal, you will be doing the best thing possible for both health and complexion.

As a first step take the waking up exercise. Lying on your back, straighten out in bed, without stretching and take ten deep breaths. Let out to their fullest capacity all the natural yawns that come and supplement them with some artificial ones. Throw out the arms and stretch the legs wide apart. Do this five times, then bring them together and bend the knees up so that the feet are flat on the bed. Repeat this ten times.

Now you are ready to jump out of bed in just as vigorous a fashion as you wish. Of course your bath follows next, but after that you should have ten minutes of really vigorous movements to stir your blood. An excellent exercise is a very near imitation of the occupants of a monkey cage. Stand erect, then squat down on the heels, at the same time throwing the knees wide apart and the arms out sideways. Raise the body and repeat, but thrusting the arms forward this time. Alternate in this fashion until the muscles are tired.

All About How To Drive.

Steer and Everything. A motoring authority in Denver, having nothing better to do, propounded a series of technical questions the other day to a group of feminine drivers. He says the results were amazing. No affidavit accompanies his report, but he's supposed to be a person of unquestioned veracity.

Here are his questions and some of the answers he says he got:

Q—If your brakes failed to work going down hill, what would you do? A—I would jump out and throw a rock under the wheels.

Q—Which side of a car going in the same direction must you pass? A—Always pass on the safest side.

Q—If your engine stalled on a car track, what would you do? A—Telephone my husband to come and fix it.

Q—When the car is standing which side should be next to the curb? A—The side nearest the sidewalk.

Q—What precaution should be taken in backing your car? A—Reverse the engine.

Q—What is the accelerator? A—A thing that has something to do with something inside the car, when you step on it, or something.

Q—When the batteries run out what must you do? A—Run after them or get new ones.

Q—Why must you keep grease and oil off the wheels? A—Because it gets your hands and clothes dirty.

Q—What is the office of the spark plug? A—The office of the spark plug is the office where it is made or sold.

Q—How far must you stop from a fire hydrant? A—Far enough not to scratch the varnish.

Q—If your engine stalls going up a hill, what do you do? A—Try to start it.

Q—What would you do if the steering gear broke? A—Drive to the nearest garage and have the man fix it.

Q—What is the speed limit in the city? In the country? A—Not over forty miles an hour in the city. Slower in the country, because the roads are bad.—Montreal Star.

CRUSHING THE YANKS.

WILLY MASCH

Old Ludendorff to gaping German ranks: "You saw how we the Russians crushed; so we shall crush the Yanks." Then to his weary warriors he said, with a sickly smile: "Fall back, my brave invincibles! Retreat a dozen miles!" It's true the German crushed the Russ; the Russ was like a child, betrayed by his own parents and by Prussian lies beguiled. I wonder if Herr Ludendorff has got it in his head that citizens from freedom's shore can thus astray be led, that they will fall for German bunk as fell the childlike Slav? Such hop-joint visions in their heads, the German leaders have. Or does the doughty Ludendorff imagine for a space that he has strength enough at hand to whip the Yankee race? One Yank can whip a brace of Teuts from war tales I've inferred, and if occasion calls for it he will take on a third. Oh, Ludendorff, begin to crush! You've told what you will do, so now hitch up your pantaloons, and put the matter through. You'll need your bombs and poison gas, and all your snickerness; the crushing graft will prove a frost when Yankees are crushed!

GERMAN PAPERS FOR PEACE.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 30. The Frankfort Zeitung expresses regret that the government fails to press on friend and foe with truth. Germany did not go into the war of lust for power. This newspaper freely admits that the Bulgarians are justified in feeling war tired, and thinks the Bulgarian people will be by Premier Malinoff. Finally the Frankfort Zeitung begs the government to make for peace unequivocally and sincerely. The Dusseldorf Nachrichten bewails the fact that troops will have to be sent to Macedonia from the west front where they are so badly needed. Its sister publication, the Essen Allgemeine Zeitung speaks of bad news coming thick and fast and repeats its previous assertion that Germans must be strong. Later in its editorial the Essen Journal falls into bitter abuse of blaspheming Wilson and his mob of rascals.
