What is Fenianism Doing?
The N. Y. Tablet (Roman Catholic) says:—The thing called Fenianism is beginning to lose its true colours. It is shipping its moorings day by day, and drifting farther out on the shoreless sea where man has but his own wild will to guide him. Day by day the organization is developing more plainly its entire identity with the secret revolutionary societies of continental Europe, who neither have, nor profess to have, any relation with God or any reverence for religion. Even an occasional glance at their various newspaper organs will convince any one who is not wilfully blind to the fact, that Fenianism is sapping, gradually but surely, the very foundations of religion among the Irish race, at least that portion of it which it has in tutorage. Happily, the poison has not reached the heart of Ireland—that heart is still sound, still Christian in its instincts, and in its affections—in its reverence for authority, its horror of vice, under what name soever it presents itself, and its supreme devotion to the interests of religion. Were it not so—were not all the more intelligent portion of the Irish everywhere disgusted, as we are, by the shameful outrages which are being perpetrated by the Fenians (if not by Fenianism) against all civilization, then might we, indeed, cease to hope for the future of Ireland, and hang our heads in shame.

But all is not lost; there is still a sound public opinion, a Christian sentiment, amongst our race that will ultimately frown down the base and cowardly acts whereby this Irish wing of the great revolution is disturbing the whole earth in signaling its progress. The majority of the Irish people still hold, and we trust will hold, by their Christian traditions—they remember the days of old, and the deeds of the men who have made their names glorious. The intelligent among them think of the true Irish patriots, who were also true Christians. They ask themselves what have these wretched plotters of dark deeds, these Irish Carbonari, in common with such men as James Fitzmaurice, Hugh O'Neill, or Owen Roe, Hugh O'Donnel, or Daniel O'Connell, or even Henry Grattan, Protestant though he was? They will think what would any of these great Irishmen, these glorious leaders, say if they heard of such deeds as the cowardly midnight murder which, a few weeks since, in an adjoining country, startled a whole continent, the attempt on the life of one of the young English princes in Australia, the murder of Mr. Fetherstonhaugh in Ireland, the blowing up of prisons &c., &c., which are too plainly brought home to Fenianism. Yes, there is still enough of religious principle among the Irish to make them sensible that such an organization, throwing religion overboard, never can, never will, be overboard.
