Sofa-bettomed chairs, plush setters, and a thick velvet carpet were bathed in the mellow glow of softly shaded gastights. Heavy laced curtains dropsilver hand bells, The conversation of the party was carried on in a low murmur. The faces were sober, even sad. It was evident that the topic under discussion was of extraordinary interest. The evening lengthened. The room became blue with the frat grant smoke of a dozen choice cigare. And still no smiles swept over the sober faces at the table. The tiny hands of the clock crept to the hour of midnight, but the murmuring conversation still continued. THE INCORRUPTIBLE JUDGE. Tuesday, the 10th of February, crime, and that evinced a determina-tion to battle with it manfully, and to stamp it out with the strong foot of law. The District Attorney was to be no longer fettered, and witnesses were to be no longer wearied. Trials were to be no longer delayed until public sentiment had been toned down, or the memory befolthe crime had dwindled to forgetfulness, "Retribution

This was the bugle blast of the war Portland by the Geo. S. It contains nine parts of copper and one of tim. like to see the man that would go back on them. Bold crimes increased in number. The plate glass of the Park Bank was smashed in broad daylight; a broker was choked in his own office, and his money carried off before his eyes, just before nightfall; a wealthy gambler was pinioned and gagged, early in the evening, in his room fronting Broadway, thousands of dollars taken from his pockets, and precious gems torn from his fingers and his frilled shirt besom; a diamond merchan is determination to quash the proceeds. frilled shirt besom; a diamond merchan, his determination to quash; the proceeds was waylaid in Fourth street; and a lings to sense a driv si to had the hundred daring petty crimes cropped out in various parts of the city, while above them all the specter of the Rogers murder towered, and haunted the public mind like a hideous night mare. At length Mr. Stephen Boyle, with a dozen aliases, was seen lurking around Squires jawelry store in the Bowery. The police successfully intercepted him. He jumped into a butcher wag on and drove for dear life. The police pursued. A running fire of pistorshots was scattered along the Bewery, but the officer caught his prey uninjured. Boyle belonged to a gang who boasted of their political influence. He was caught on a Monday—he was tried and convicted on Thursday. The unand convicted on Thursday. The unflinching Judge unbesitatingly sen-tenced him to the State Prison for 40 years. On the same day three thieves of political influence pleaded guilty of burglary in the third degree. The bait did not take—sentence was not suspended. They were given the full term—five years in Sing Sing. In the Court of Oyer and Terminer, at the same hour, George Jones, a thief, was tried, convicted of burglary in the first degree and sentenced to the State Prison for 20 years, the whole proceeds ing occupying only the shart space of five minutes. Quick work was this by an earnest Judge, reclected last Fall. And this is a Judge for whose impeachment the Tribune has clamored during the past year! THUNDERBOLTS DROPPING. So much for one day's work. The snarp, business-like manner. The waiters threaded the group noiselessly, and disappeared as soon as their orders were filled. Occasionally a diamond flashed from the bosom of an excited speaker, or sparkled from fingers which were impatiently drumming the speaker, or sparkled from fingers which were impatiently drumming the mar-ble before their owners. One o'clock slame of the Sixth Ward, the "fences" came. The business of the conclave of Prince street and the liquor shops loud and deep. Politicians were seen, but in vain. The magic word 'Primeries' had lost ite charm.

Failing in their schemes, the thieves All this at the Manhattan Club-House. All these were prominent members, chiefs of a great political parly, who had determined to purge that party of a load which threatened to strangle it in a city where its filled with professionals, and the room itself was crowded, with the intention of overawing the Judges. But all was of no avail-justice was dealt out with inexorable rigor.

ces of his crime that he had proclaimed his intentino of murder in an open court room. The readers of the Sun have perused the history of his trial. The chamber of the Court was througed with worst desperadoes. Witnesses were threatened with death; the jury was dared to bring in a verdict of guilty; bets of $50 to $10 were made in the presence of the jurors that the murderer would escape. The Judge on the bench was cursed for his precautions against an attempt to rescue warned the villains that their purposes were known, and that they would not be allowed to succeed. So great was the danger that the presence of 200 policemen was necessary to prevent an outbreak. The witnesses gave in their evidence with nervous reluctance. The jury retired to deliberate, but were afraid to return with their verdict. Even the Judge resorted to stategy to clear the room, saying he was going home, and ordering the jury looked up, as there was no prospect of their agreeing. The gang still watched the proceedings with wolfish eyes. At last the jury returned. Fear had left its trace in the verdict, for it was tempored with a recommendation to more or the proceed with a recommendation to more or the second with a se pered with a recommendation to mercy: The gang festered with curses; but the Judge, with quiet dignity, arose in the midnight gaslight and sentenced the brutal assassin to death. The life of one of them was saved only by the timely presence of a police officer. The hatred of the gang, however, seems to have been concentrated upon the Judges.

THE THIEVES AT BAY BARNARD ESCORED

HOME BY A PHOMINENT REPUBLICAN

On the evening succeeding the sentence of death the Judge visited a friend in the Fifth-ave. Hotel. In ten minutes the main hall was filled with a growd of beetle-browed ruffians, all eagerly scents ing his tracks. Respectable citizens gazed at the unusual irruption in wonder. The Judge, though unarmed, remained cool and impassive, not seeming to notice the scowls of the gaug or the curses hissand in his ear. Once he asked a number of well known citizens whether they had any special objection to accompany him home. All refused. One man—a prominent Republican office-holder—took the Judge by the hand time al . vacied

"You are doing a noble, work, Judge, but you are in great danger. Why do you go unarmed?"

"The law forbids the carrying of concealed weapons. I cannot break the law even if my life should pay the forfeit. I shall do my duty regardless of consequences."

"I am armed, and will go home with you," replied the Republican.
THE BAND OF ASSASSINS AT HIS HEELS. The circle of ruffians was broken and the two passed without the door of the hotel. Stealthy footsteps followed them and beneath the gas lamp at the intersection of Broadway and Twenty-first street another murderous-ayed gang was encountered. The Judge and his companion were saluted with profanity, but no violence was offered. They reached the Judge's home in safety. But the band of assassins are still at his heels. BARNARD IS "BITTERLY UPBRAIDED" BY O'BRIEN, WHO DON'T WANT TO BE

Will John Real be executed? His comrades are fearfully excited. They have no hopes of Governor Heffman's interference, and, as a last resort, they have rested their expectations upon Sheriff O'Brien. They openly assert that that official will not obey the mandaty of the Court. They say that the Sheriff will take the risk of impeachment for a dereliction of duty, and afterward throw himself into the arms of his consti-tuents for a re-election. His fight with the leaders of his party has already begun. It is said that the Judge has been bitterly upbraided by the Sheriff for his exposure and defeat of the plan for the rescue of Real.
But the death sentence has been pronounced, and the assassin must die. If the Sheriff refuses to do his duty another officer will be found who will execute the sentence of the law.
