The reports of the damage done to the Manitoba crops, first published in The World, placed the extent of the injury at little short of 50 per cent. This estimate was character ed in many quarters as excessive, but later mation bears out the first despatches. Sir William P. Howland, who has returned after two weeks spent in Manitoba, during time he took particular care to obtain reliable data on which to base an opinion of the damage, in ' an interview published vesterday places it at fully 50 per cent. We can now have little doubt of the evidence of wide-spread loss, but may hope that the threshers will show less injury than we can a stronger influence in the United States than with present indications expect.
