NILHILISM—WHAT IS IT?

Few indeed are the readers of this paper who have not formed an opinion of the Russian nihilists, in which they have been regarded as a band of blood-thirsty bandits, organized for purposes of murder, arson and pillage. In this opinion founded in fact, it is based on a true knowledge of nihilism and nihilists? We think not; and we intend herein to give some of the reasons why we have arrived at this conclusion. The Eastern Empire and Northern Asia, a vast extent of territory, populated by some four scores of human beings, are under the absolute rule of one man, the Emperor Nicholas, and the thirty millions of our fellow creatures in this vast empire are in the High Priest of the East. In these respects Russia is widely from all other European countries, and especially in the constitutional methods for the redress or correction of wrongs and the rights attending the administration of public affairs, are rendered entirely impossible. They have no rights not conceded by the will of their Czar; no civil rights distinct from, and independent of his will. The redress of grievances therefore cannot be effected in that country by what we call constitutional methods, but by revolution only. It is needless to say that such a system would not be tolerated by any of the nations of the Western Empire for a day, and resistance to it would receive the God speed of all good men.

The late Emperor Nicholas, with a view to convince neighboring sovereigns that he was desirous of conferring the blessings of education upon his people, established liberal and advanced universities and colleges in various sections of his wide spread dominions, a course of procedure that his successors would give much to have imitated out of the history of their country. It was among the enlightened students of these seats of learning that the first notes of nihilism were heard, the doctrines of communism preached. With all the enthusiasm of youth and love of progress, coupled with a deep patriotic sentiment, they took England as their model, and desired a representation of the masses of the people in the administration of the government of the nation; and as the first step in the desirable change they determined to seek emancipation of their alma maters from the sole control of the Czar; but were met by the arbitrary assertion of the will of the Emperor, who not only rejected their measures, but declared them treasonable, and punished their authors by the knout, and by banishment to Siberia. This treatment of his subjects was the leaven of the fermentation now known as nihilism, which is nothing more or less than a protest against the rights of one man to govern eighty millions of his fellow men by the mere expression of his will, whether for good or ill. The nihilist element in Russia represents, therefore, the educated and intelligent classes of the empire, and the ignorant, depraved and criminal classes, and the chief obstacle in the former's success is to be found in the ignorance and inertia of the latter. This ignorance is a Chinese wall of protection to the Czar and the chief barrier to the efforts of the nihilists. Until the peasantry can be made to feel that God rights inalienable and valuable, and that the powers of their ruler are properly only derivable from the governed, their progress must of necessity be slow. Freedom of speech being prohibited, the press fully manned, the rights of public meeting denied, and all modes of action looking towards redress of grievances made unprofitable or impossible. What course of conduct is left but direct personal attack upon the sanctified nightmare that oppressed and distressed them? No wonder then that a conspiracy of all that is good and worthy in Russia has been formed to endeavor to extort by threats of assassination and intimidation generally, an amelioration of the wretched system under which they suffer. This course has not been a matter of course with the nihilist organizations; it would most joyfully have adopted other modes if they had been possible.

As the matter now stands it cannot be very long before the revolution will be a fact, and the Autocrat forced to abdicate his power, or yield to the reasonable desires of his subjects, by taking them into his confidence, and asking their assistance to aid him in establishing a Constitutional government after the model of that of England, which is the substance of the demands put forth by the intelligent and nihilist subjects of the Emperor.

Better a thousand Czares should fall by the hand of an assassin, than that one should hold millions of his fellow men in slavery and hopeless ignorance. Already has their ruler been driven by drawn feet into the fortress at Cautchanka, as he is, he does not feel entirely safe from the long arms and daggered vengeance of his people. The Romanoff is deemed himself to be a deserved destruction by his insane obstinacy and cowardice. His prestige as Priest and King is losing its hold upon the minds even of his most ignorant and faithful slaves and the time of the end is at hand. To yield to the demands of his subjects might save his dynasty; to continue his refusal will end in its total ruin.

The "Czar's Closure"

Many persons have been racking their brains to obtain information as to the etymology of the new word "closure" which has of late appeared so often in the public press, and which is used to designate Mr. Stedman's recent parliamentary measure. Not a little chagrin is experienced by the discovery that no such word is to be found even in our mammoth quartos. We have seen no reference to this matter in any of our exchanges.

The fact is that "closure" is a French word, meaning pretty much the same as our words "closure, enclosure or inclusion. In conformity with a ridiculous old custom, Norman French is still used in the British Parliament in Norman French. This gives an air of dignity to the proceedings and keeps unlettered people gazing in wonder as to what may be the meaning of these curious terms and phrases.

The bill for simply closing a tedious or unnecessary debate is termed a Closure Bill, and that is all there is about the marvellous thing.

The Third Annual Meeting of the Teachers' Association for Inspection, District No. 4, embracing the counties of Digby and Annapolis, will be held in Whitman's Hall, Annapolis, on Thursday and Friday next, the 27th and 28th inst., commencing at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the first day of meeting.

An interesting programme has been provided, which includes papers on original lessons on the following subject: Needed Reforms in our Public Schools. The Successful Teacher, Mr. J. A. Dyer, the Best Method of Teaching Geography, and the Importance of his will. The redress of grievances therefore cannot be effected in that country by what we call constitutional methods, but by revolution only.

The Superintendent of Education, has signified his intention to be present at the meetings of the Association, and has consented to deliver a public lecture under the auspices of the Association in Whitman's Hall, on Saturday evening on some subject germane to the object of the association. A large gathering of teachers is expected, and it is believed that the good effect of the meeting will be visible and will be after in the Common Schools of the District.

Obituary.—It is our melancholy duty to record the recent death of two very aged and worthy members of this community, namely, Mr. Oliver Sanders and his sister-in-law, the wife of Mr. Benjamin Sanders. Both of the deceased were the grandchildren of John Sanders, a native, we believe, of Cornwall, Eng., who came to Annapolis as master Artificer in the employ of the Royal Ordnance, about the year 1750, and who married a daughter of the Hon. Sir John Johnson, widow nee Oliver, daughter and ninth child of Monsieur Antoine Oliver, native of old France, then a resident of Annapolis Royal. In the old graveyard in Annapolis may still be seen the tomb stones which mark the site of the graves of the maternal great-grandparents of the deceased. He died in 1758, one hundred and twenty-four years ago. Oliver Sanders, who was buried four days ago, lived to a very advanced age, having nearly become a nonage man, has always been regarded as a honest, upright, and useful member of the community, and his loss is a sad bereavement to his many friends.

Without a doubt, J. W. Beckwith was the largest and finest assortment of goods in the town. His assortment of Dress Goods cannot be surpassed, ranging in price from 12c. to 60c. per yard. He has a large stock of colored and white goods and all wool Delia dress goods in all the latest styles. He has a large stock of 23c. to 40c. per yard; Cass. Dyed. Cancellates, Cambrics, and Muslins, and a large stock of shades and quillets from 25c. to $1.10. He has a large stock of ready-made clothing, and in fact a call will convince you that he has taken particular pains to make his goods of the best quality and price.

—The funeral of Jesse James, the outlaw, robber and murderer, was held at the residence of his mother, Mrs. James, on Friday last, at 10 o'clock. Two clergymen officiated; a select choir sang the hymns; the Sheriff gave dignity to the occasion; women were present in large numbers; the service was copiously and talked of meeting her poor murdered boy on the beautiful shore, &c., &c. The Fort brothers who shot and killed Jesse, were pardoned the same day. They are now low on society, in fact free men and citizens. Verily they are queer people who rob the border.

—Another old landmark departed this life last week, Mr. H. Fleet. The old gentleman was born in Annapolis in 1792, and has lived in various sections of the County. For a number of years he has lived with his son-in-law, Mr. John E. Sampson of this town. The deceased bore a good character and had the respect of all. His remains were taken to Bear River for interment.

—The Deceased Wife's Sister's Bill has passed the Senate on its third reading by a vote of 31 to 11.

Concessions for 1882.

We have received Vol. 1 of the Census report for 1881. Its preface is a description of the manner in which the census was taken, and remarks on general and the contents of the volumes.

Table No. 1 gives Superficies, Sexes, Families, Populations, Districts, Congregational.

Table No. 2 gives religions of people.
