A hungry man or one out of employment seldom wastes much time in reasoning. The politician who tells him that the government is to blame for his unfortunate condition can count upon his sympathy and vote at once. And for this reason a republican victory in the state of Massachusetts, with a sweeping the state of Massachusetts, with a sweeping majority, is confidently looked for. The state is strongly republican under ordinary circumstances, although for three years in sion the democrats have elected their brilliant young candidate for governor, William E. Russel, while all the rest of their ticket has been defeated. This year Governor Russel retires, while another Russel democratic standard. He, too, is popular and a brilliant speaker; but the calamity ory would be sufficient to defeat even Clevend himself this year, it is thought.

There is an old saying that all is fair in love and war, and politics is a species of warfare. In the heat of an election campaign most men seem to act upon the principle ory which seems likely to bring victory is aised, no matter how unreasonable it be. All the same, these cries and expedients are thoroughly dishonest and frequently do a day, thus preventing many from being presents of ceaseless talk, during which every expedient which human ingenuity could devise was resorted to, in order to obstruct the transaction of business and prevent a vote being taken, the silver senators have yielded and the bill so long delayed has passed. What was it all about does some one ask. Why, simply a bill to repeal the law which compelled the government to buy 4,500,000 ounces of silver every month at length been reached. After nearly ten 4,500,000 ounces of silver every month at the market price of silver. Under this law the government bought that amount of silver monthly, stored it away in the treasury vaults and issued silver bills in its stead to the extent of its value. There are now stored away in these vanlts many tons of any good and is all the time lessening in value as the price of silver declines in the markets of the world. In the meantime when any of these silver bills are presented to the treasury they have to be rede gold in order to keep them at their face value. All will remember the silver scare which occurred a few months ago when the terview that it might soon become necessary to redeem these silver certificates in silver interested observer to have been the quintescence of folly. It was passed during Harrison's time to catch the votes of the silver states. In this respect, however, it failed, as those states wanted free coinage of silver and nearly all of them were carried by the Populist party, which adopted free coinage as one of its leading planks. Now the silver men oppose its repeal simply because i monthly. But why should a governmen buy silver and store it away, merely to helpequal force demand that it should also buy his wheat, store it away, and issue certificates on the strength of it? Indeed, the peoples party in some of the agricultural states of the west did advocate some suc principle as that. It was simply impossible for the United States, great as its resources: ing for it in gold. Such a law had to be repealed sooner or later, and although it has taken a desparate effort to accomplish it, seen what new legislation shall be enacted to regulate the use of silver. In the mean time the repeal of this act helps to remove doubt as to the stability and value of the silver bills. They should be all right now
