Good books thoroughly read make men of better, purer, and nobler minds. But if the ideals derived from them are helpful, more than often is it the case that it was the language in which they were couched that rendered them so. Forget the words of the author, and the idea itself will soon become indefinite and indistinct. If, then, it is of value to store the mind with the thoughts and teachings of literature, we certainly cannot afford to neglect the best. And here the Bible claims a place, for the superiority both of its literary qualities and of its teachings. If studied merely from a literary standpoint, "it contains the choicest matter, the best laws and profoundest mysteries that were ever penned. It describes the most ancient antiquities and strange events, wonderful occurrences, heroic deeds, unparalleled wars"—and this all in the purest English, and through a phraseology always simple and condensed. "It teaches the best rhetorician and exercises the wisest critic."

One grand concern with buyers is to obtain garments that will last—garments whose fabrics will not waste, or whose colors will not fade. There is one seller in the great market of the world who assures the permanence of His wares. Hear ye Him! "Buy of the gold tried in the fire, that ye may be rich; and white raiment, that ye may be clothed."—Arnos.

What sculpture is to a block of marble education is to a human soul. The philosopher, the saint, the hero, the wise, the good and the great man, very often lie hidden and concealed where a proper education might have brought them to light.
