The attention of every Farmer is particularly valled to this now perfect Reaper. The principle upon which this Machine is constructed conveys to the mind of every observer the fact that it is most perfect in every details and fully adapted to perform its work with the greatest ease and facility. Its cutting capacity autoniahes all. So perfect is the Machine in this respect that we venture to state that it will cut anything that grows in the shape of grain, or even grass, and do it without choking up, or taxing the labour of the horses or the patients of the driver. For picking up ledged grain it has no equal. Its tilling apparatus places all tangled or down grain under perfect control of the driver without interfering with the truck or the horses. The platform and raking apparatus work entirely independent of the truck. For Sheaf-making we can naking apparatus work entirely independent of the truck.
