

'Yes,' he answered the Lord of the soil. 'Boys,' said Father Mick, 'don't fear for Gerald—God Almighty is with him—'

WORDS OF PEACE.—ADDRESS TO THE CATHOLICS OF BELFAST.

From the Ulster Observer (Catholic). It will not sound strange in the ears of the Catholics of Belfast, when we preach to them a doctrine of peace.

IRISH INTELLIGENCE.

Belfast is no longer a scene of carnage. Peace has at length been restored after the town had been in the hands of armed rioters for twelve days.

Do you believe it was necessary for the police to fire for the preservation of their lives? Well, as far as I could see, I think the number of police was able to drive away the crowd with fixed bayonets.

Do you see the police struck? I believe they were struck for the stones came among them.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

day morning actually expelled from the premises solely on account of their religion. This is a terrible state of things—more terrible than any phase of the riots—more likely to produce disturbance and provoke retaliation.

Even those doing duty seemed to me to be too much, and unnecessarily, under the fear of personal responsibility, which prevented them from meeting the rioters as they ought to have done.

Disturbances in DUBLIN.—Considerable alarm was excited in Dublin on Friday night by a report, which was extensively circulated, that the Nationalists intended to assemble in great numbers and throw down the statue of King William in College-green.

Disturbances in DUBLIN.—A considerable alarm was excited in Dublin on Friday night by a report, which was extensively circulated, that the Nationalists intended to assemble in great numbers and throw down the statue of King William in College-green.

Masonic Ceremony at Belfast.—Belfast, Tuesday.—This evening the Marquis of Donegal was installed in the Ulster Hall as Provincial Grand Master of the Freemasons of Belfast and North Down.

Sympathetic riots broke out in Dundalk, where a crowd burnt King William in effigy, and the ruckled through the streets, breaking windows.

Even those doing duty seemed to me to be too much, and unnecessarily, under the fear of personal responsibility, which prevented them from meeting the rioters as they ought to have done.

Orange Demonstration at Cork.—At Cork, a magnificent city, a captain in the army named Tooker, thought the time suitable for holding an Orange demonstration at his residence, and the brethren duly assembled, wearing their scarfs and insignia.

The following account of the proceedings at Captain Tooker's appeared next day in the Cork Constitution.—A musical promenade and soiree under the patronage of the members of the Orange Society in this city took place yesterday evening in the grounds of Captain Tooker, Mardike, which had been lent for the occasion.

The Town Council at its next meeting, adopted a resolution calling upon the Lord Chancellor to supersede Captain Tooker in the Commission of the Peace.

Lord Chancellor's Secretary's Office, Four Courts, Dublin, Aug. 20, 1864. 'Sir, I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication to the Lord Chancellor of yesterday's date.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

Masonic Ceremony at Belfast.—Belfast, Tuesday.—This evening the Marquis of Donegal was installed in the Ulster Hall as Provincial Grand Master of the Freemasons of Belfast and North Down.

Sympathetic riots broke out in Dundalk, where a crowd burnt King William in effigy, and the ruckled through the streets, breaking windows.

draws would seem to be the grossest possible caricature of its truthfulness had not been so horribly illustrated by the recent outbreak of brutal savagery and Jewish animosity.

It is an acknowledged principle that a Government, though it may crush the liberties of its subjects, ought to guard their lives. Every Government on earth does it but one—the English Government of Ireland.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

draws would seem to be the grossest possible caricature of its truthfulness had not been so horribly illustrated by the recent outbreak of brutal savagery and Jewish animosity.

It is an acknowledged principle that a Government, though it may crush the liberties of its subjects, ought to guard their lives. Every Government on earth does it but one—the English Government of Ireland.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.

Do you see that two or three of the constabulary could have quelled that disgraceful riot? I do not think they could.