

The Buzzard's Wild Cry 19

Bird-land, that in each different part which we may explore we find a distinct class of birds. In the great dense forests of the

REDSTART'S NEST UNDER TILES.

West and North I have found the Buzzard at home, where his wild cry is the only sound; and small birds, which love the outskirts of the wood, are absent. Then on the marshes of