FIFTY-TWO YEARS

Meeting of Home Bank of Canada Recalls the Days of an Old Institution.

The First Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders of The Home Bank of Canada was held yesterday at the head offices, 8 West King-street. The original charter of the institution dates from 1854, when the Toronto Savings Bank was launched. In 1878 the Bank developed into the "Home Savings and Loan Company" and operations were begun under a form of charter which entirely filled the needs of the time. Of recent years industrial activities in Canada have made a wider prospect for the scope of business banking and so the Savings & Loan Co.. after twenty-eight years' activity in most of the departments of finance associated with banking, took up the original scope of its charter again and became The Home Bank of Canada.

If it were entirely a new bank, with a new list of Shareholders and a new executives it would not have to be reported that a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. has been paid for the first five months appreciated, as it is better known, is of the Bank's operations. But aside from the dividend, the general statefrom the dividend, the general statement, issued recently, shows some very conservative figures. There is a Reserve Fund equal to one-quanter of the entire subscribed stock. This is an item of security for the Shareholders, which, like the dividend, cannot be produced within any short period of development, and in addition there is a Profit and Loss Account of $30,503.28. thirty or forty new branches as a result of this summer's course of lec-

Where the Depositors Come In. The depositors of The Home Bank of Canada may read with satisfaction that the sum of nearly four and one-half millions of dollars of the public's money, which the Bank holds, is placed so as to be readily convertible into cash. In fact, the great bulk of this money is a cash asset for the Bank. Something over three million four hundred thousand dollars of this sum is secured by collateral loans on stocks, bonds, and debentures, and the money is therefore returnable to the Bank at any time it may be demanded. Has Followed the Tried Methods. Has Followed the Tried Methods.

An analysis of The Home Bank's general statement shows that the institution has taken its place solidly among the chartered Banks of Canada without any resort to methods of "high finance." Although there has been a change of name, and a broader scope of activities, the newer institution has carried the support of its old clientele, while the new charter has brought in a very perceptible gain of deposits. The notes issued by the Bank have proved the most attractive of any series put out to the public, and the circulation is rapidly increasing.
