MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND

ADELE GARRISON'S NEW PHASE OF REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

What Lillian Underwood Said When Madge Told Her Story.

What Lillian Underwood Said

"Now, tell me all about it," Lillian commanded, when we had reached my own room and she had turned a precautionary key in the lock.

"All about what?" I evaded, foolishly enough, for I had been longing to confide in her.

"This mess out at Bayview," Lillian retorted. "I've been watching it from the papers, and I tell you it's dynamite. The ramifications of such a thing are endless, and some of them might hit you or any other innocent bystander. I've been waiting for you to tell me something about it, but I've come to the conclusion that you don't realize the gravity of the thing or how it may affect you."

"Do you think so?" I asked significantly.

"Now, be whirled on me.

"Your bones are prophetic," I retorted. "I felt it in my bones."

"Your bones are prophetic," I retorted. "I was just on the point of coming to see you when you arrived."

"I knew it," she declared triumphantly, "Now, you sit down there, and, as the lawyers say, 'refresh your memory.' I want everything from the very beginning, and—please don't leave out anything, no matter how trivial."

I felt a sudden lifting of the heavy burden of anxiety I had been carrying concerning the complications surrounding Milly Stockbridge's death. Lillian's trained mind, her boundless energy, her loving heart, were all enlisted in my behalf, It would be a malevolent pare that tea?"

"Yes, and I had to repeat the directions two or three times."

"H—m!" A long pause, then another crisp question.
"Didn't I read somewhere that she had fallen between her tea table and the telephone?"
"That was what Mr. Stockbridge said who found her."

ing Milly Stockbridge's death. Lillian's trained mind, her boundless energy, her loving heart, were all enlisted in my behalf. It would be a malevolent fate, indeed, which could thwart her." I did not need to "refresh my memory," as she had requested. Every incident not only surrounding but leading up to the tragedy was etched indelibly upon my brain. And I had already marshaled them into a connected story for Lillian's hearing, when after the appearance of the pseudo-lawyer I had "Any indications that she had been drinking tea or serving it to any-for Lillian's hearing, when after the appearance of the pseudo-lawyer I had decided to appeal to her for aid in unraveling the tangle in which I seemed to be enmeshed.

Lillian cupped her chin in her hands with her elbows on her knees, almost at my first word. The old familiar attitude would have in itself reassured me if her words had not already done so. It spelled Lillian in action, definitely "on the job," as Dicky would say.

I began my story with Kenneth Stockbridge's odd behavior when he had first asked me to take the position of assistant in the Bayview high school, and traced the chain of events conscientiously down to the mysterious death of the principal's wife. At two points she interrupted me, but without looking up or changing at all from her tense attitude.

"A Cryptic Answer.

"Any indications that she had been drinking tea or serving it to anyone;"

"I am sure not. Alice Holcombe was explicit on that point."

"None whatever, except that it was the same kind which Mr. Stockbridge had in his photographic laboratory."

"Of course it was, the clever fiend!" was Lillian's cryptic answer. Then with a impatience which she only shows when intent upon something baffling.

"Now let us hope that the devil takes care of his own, for there's certainly a fine mess here for somebody's cooking."

By Congreso Kembla SATURDAY, OCT. 11. While this day's planetary positions presage some important operations, both in a commercial and social way, yet there are certain figures emphasizing the importance of caution and good judgment, particularly in the matter of hazarding money. The Jupiter transit is distinctly unpropitious, and is magnifled by the ominous place of Neptune-threatoning loss or distress through the agency of fraud, deception or false representation. The benefits are to come through the excellent aspect of Moon trine Saturn, which removes old obstacles and delays and makes way for new and stable undertakings. Other positions give good and dependable judgment, and the spiendid Venus trine should bring pleasure and profit to the realm of heart and home.

Those whose birthday it is should be careful in all money matters, avoiding led by the ominous place of Neptune
