As Hiram Sees It

"Hiram," said The Times reporter to Mr. Hiram Hornbeam, "this is a sad occasion."
"What's happened?"
"Eight of my friends want me to vote for you."
"They are all respectable citizens," said the reporter, "and I can only vote for you."
"Do they all good fellows?" asked Hiram.
"They are all respectable citizens," said the reporter, "but each four told me that if the other four are elected the province will go back into a wilderness state and there will be nobody but the crows to read the burning words I pour forth in the paper every day."
"Well, now—that's too bad," said Hiram. "Mebbe you bette not vote at all."
"If I don't," said the reporter, "I will be charged with being a traitor to the sacred franchise with which I am endowed in a sad occasion."
"Then vote fer two on each side," suggested Hiram.
"Unless I vote the ticket, the whole ticket and nothing but the ticket," the reporter—"I will be charged with betraying the cause—whichever cause it is."
"Well, then," said Hiram, "you better draw lots. As fer as I'm concerned I know who I'm gonno vote fer—an I don't let nobody make up my mind fer me—no, sir."

RAINFALL BELOW NORMAL FOR JULY

Hours of Sunshine Numbered Only 174—Temperature About Usual.

Although the rainfall for this district was slightly below the normal during the month of July, the number of hours of bright sunshine, was remarkably low, being only 174 hours. Statistics for the month's weather as they have been compiled at the meteorological observatory in Douglas avenue, P. L. Hutchinson said last night showed the rainfall had amounted to 3.35 inches, or three-tenths of an inch below the normal. The mean temperature had been 60 degrees, which was just about normal, and during the month the range of temperature had been from 78 degrees on July 12, as the maximum to 46 degrees on July 1 as a minimum. The temperatures during Saturday, Mr. Hutchinson said, varied from 64 to 84 according to the official records, and on Sunday they ranged from 62 to 84 degrees. The rainfall of Saturday amounted to only .02 of an inch while Saturday began well, clearing towards nightfall and ended in a rain storm of short duration. Sunday reversed the process, and after a cloudy morning, sent a bright, warm and sunny afternoon. The wind still clung to the southeast, however, a quarter more favorable for storms than the weather.

should be considered from two standpoints — beauty and strength of construction. Some dealers, in their desire to cut prices show suites which are superficially attractive, but cannot possibly give many years of service. This is one of the reasons why you should come to a reliable concern which has proved, during more than thirty years of its business career, that no goods of an inferior character are sent out to its customers under any condition.
