EXTRAORDNARY SUPERSTITION IN SKYE. -In connection with a case of suicide at Storr in Skye, the "Inverness Courier" says :-- A strange superstition has manifested itself—one which we thought was extinct long ago When it was proposed to inter the remains of the young man in the churchyard at Por-tree, the inhabitants rose on mass, and vehemently resisted the attempt to do so, we believe successfully. Thee absurdity is crowned by the reason assigned for the opposition. Not as might be expected, an idea that any indig nity was offered to the remains of those althe place being launted, but that, if the funeral was allowed to take place, no herrings would be caught in the neighbourhood for seven years. In a similar case which occured in one of the parishes on the west coast of the mainland a good many years ago, a controversy arose as to whether the body of an unhappy man who committed suicide should be interred among his relatives or at the back of the church, the superstition there not going the length of entire exclusion from the church yard. After much wrangling, the matter was referred to the parish minister, who, of course treated the herring theory with contempt, and decided for interment in the family burying-ground, which was effected smidst many grumblings and ominous headshaking. The sequel, however was very curious. To the astonishment of all the inhabitants, and not a little to the satisfaction of the minister, the fishing in the adjoining loch that year proved the most successful and remunerative on re-

SAD STATE OF THE FMPRESS CHARLOTTE. -The Empress Charlotte of Mexico is now lying in delirious agony, during which she sometimes heard to whisper the words, "Mother," . "Victor," "Paris," "Max." The Archibishop of Malines does not leave her beside, in the hopes of cheering the last moments of the victim of the Mexican tragedy. The King of the Belgians will probably be prevented from taking his usual autumn trip England through the impending death of his sister
