The count's family ate sparingly of the dish, but Ting made the "mushrooms" the main feature of his meal. Ting was seized with violent pains late in the night, and physicians who were hurriedly summoned were unable to give him relief. He died in great agony at 2 o'clock. Ting was 35 years old. He joined Dr. Sutherland's Presbyterian church two weeks ago, and to-day the doctor preached his funeral sermon. The body was placed in a vault. The bones, according to the Chinese custom, will be taken back to Uh na. Mrs. Mitkiewiez received word to-day from some of the friends who had received some of the mushrooms that they had been taken ill after eating them, but had recovered.
