livery, and the movement of merchandise is light. Ocean freights continue tow atthough coasting rates are firm.

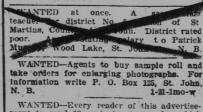

Trade at Quebec continues good and spring orders come in freely. Maturing paper is promptly met. Montreal reports a good wholesale movement for January. Groceries are not active, some of the larger houses being still engaged on annual balances, but business in hardware has opened earlier than usual, with especially heavy demand for metals and paints. Spring dry goods move briskly, shoe factories are busy and collections are prompt. Wholesale trade is noderately active at Toronto and travelers orders for spring goods are larger than at this period last year with prospects excellent. Payments are satisfactory.

Little change has occured in the situation at Vancouver. Wholesalers report January trade in excess of last years and prospects favorable. Retail trade is quiet in most lines and collections are fair.

Failures this week in the United States are 243 against 255 last week and 301 in the corresponding week last year, and in Canada 30 against 27 last week and 40 last year.

THE LAWYER AT LAW.

In Buffalo, New York, a place twenty miles northwest from East Aurora, fives an attorney by the name of Sullivan. Or an attorney by the mane of the court to be exact, the gentleman is an exact torney, for Mr. Sullivan, after being an attorney for thirty years, suddenly finds himself at the foot of the court house teps, his reputation all covered with black and blue spots like the berth-marks on a man who has crawled into the wrong

I never saw Mr. Sullivan until last week, when he came to me and related the grievious wrongs that had been done him and requested that I would put him straight before the American people. This I promised to do; and so now I vill briefly and without prejudice recite the facts.

Col. Sullivan is what Whistler would all an Arrangement in Adipose. He has a goodly double chin, soft pudgy hands, and a taking way. He is astute, with many quips and quiddities, and sleeps on a bench with a copy of the Buffalo Courier bench with a copy of the Bunaio Countries, over his face to keep off the bluebotties. His complexion is burnt umber, deepening to cadmium red on the proboscis.

I think Mr. Sullivan has wind enough to practice law, but not enough to say his rayers, and my opinion is he will never lie by drowning, as his countenance perfect gallows. Three years ago a girl, seventeen years old, came to Mr. Sullivan's office and told terrible tale of wrong. It seems that three miscreants had assaulted the young voman, and mistreated her grievously She had no money—no friends.

What Mr. Sullivan calls his heart, was touched. He would befriend this poor eature—he would see that justice was one her. In the kindness of his generous pirit he undertook her cause.

The case was laid before them-all were well frightened, and they paid over to Mr. Sullivan seven hundred and fifty dol-lars to have the matter dropped. All of

The girl came into the office about this ime, and Mr. Sullivan paid her three nundred and fifty dollars, keeping four nundred dollars for himself—a not exorpitant fee, since lawyers have been known to keep all they got and ask for more, as Mr. Sullivan intimates.

Mr. Sullivan intimates.

New York, Feb. 1—Ard, barks Antonia Padre, from Smyrna; Beeswing, from Tocopilla; Charles Loring, from Port Royal: Hamburg, from Hong Kong; Mannie Swan, from Fernandina; brig Daley, from Port Tampa (Fla.); schrs Sunlight, from Virginia; Annie B Mitchell, from Philadelphia, for Attorney Number Two then had Sull

van haled into court, where the facts were et forth. The judge was convinced that ullivan kept all of the money, and so as pay into court the seven hundred and fifty dollars he had collected, and the Sullivan resisted the order and was a ested. He then accused the judiciary on attempt to rob him; and finally he we sked to show cause why he should not be disbarred from his right to practice aw in the State of New York.

The case was tried, and Sullivan was He carried the case to the Appellate Division, and a new trial was ordered. On the second trial Sullivan was :

judges, three Federal Court judges and one United States commissioner had had here entered suit against the seventee ages in the sum of two hundred thousand dollars each, or a trifle of, say, two and t half milions in all. The Bill of Complaint covered three hundred folios, and harged the judicial ermine with conspi heresy, contumacy and contravention. It fact, Sullivan sued so many judges that ounsel, got their cases transferred the Buffalo on change of venue, and when the ness was thrown out of court upon the consequent, irrelevant and immaterial, an sullivan should go a long distance to the s a fool, but what shall we say of a lav er who rushes into litigation to get eve ellyakes, unless he bellyakes in a pure clients. Sullivan is what the printers would a Bold-face Antique Type.

When the accused judges allowed the irate Sullivan to run his course and pile and nearly as much for printing his cas waste basket, and fired the ex-Learne Counsel down the chute, they revealed agrim sense of humor. This seems the only gizzard full of law.

My friend Mr. A. S. Trude once ticing law, but in the legal profe there is no place for a dam fool.' Sullivan is fifty years old, weighs a p bull-dog and a tyke-he doesn't known enough to let go-he just hangs on to the mind the high precedent of Commod Trunnion, and ordered, "Off with breeches and give him twenty strokes with a rope's end!"-The Philistine.

DODO'S BROTHER.

her final landing with her load of excursion-

On the floor of his 15x5-foot cabin the purser sat mending a triangular rent in his coat. Anyone but an innate gentleman would also have been saying impolite words, for, instead of closing up the hole, his energetic stitches were pulling the sides away and making it larger than before, while outside in the long narrow passage leading from the stern to the stem of the boat, the crush it was his duty to prevent, every moment became more compact. In sheer desperation the pursuer took as mmense, final stitch and dew it up with so violent a jerk that the needle pleaced his over hanging nose. "Condemn it all!" he muttered, flinging down the coat and making a stride to the door in his shirt sleeves. The door opened a crack and then stuck-it always did when he was exasperated. Simultaneously the profile of a girl's face and golden pompadour appeared on the other side.

"George, you have been drinking," "No, I haven't, only one glass," came in mascu'ihe tones from a little in front of her. "George Menville, if I thought you would you wish for it," he said gently.

Half way up his grip fell from his unsteady hand and came thumping down ta the floor. The pureer picked it up, and then took the man's arm. "Allow me to assist you to my cabin where no one will disturb you, and you can sleep off you dizziness," he said. He was glad to do this for her sake, but the thought of her in his place suggested that the best service anyone could do her would be to sink her brother below the blue waves of the lake forever out of her life Instead, however, he placed him on the divan in the tiny cabin, and telling him he should be notified when the boat stopped, left him there. He went through the dining room to a window in the stern and looked through the blind. The girl was standing in the very end of the boat, her arm around the pillar, her head leaning against it, gazing out on the lake. The boat's whistle sounded and then he went to the cabin to wake the man, and get him straightened out. As he opened the door it struck against something. It was the man lying in a heap on the floor, hopelessly, helplessly drunk, with an empty wine bottle in his hand, and his open grip explaining where it had come from.

The purser groaned aloud, then a daring scheme darted into his haad. Why not to have the girl get off without him-the George." crowd would make this possible—take him the round trip and get him sober and well- had?" lectured before he handed him over to her, who, when she found her brother had not got off, would doubtless wait there for him? "Yes. He has but lately returned from Australia, and has not quite recovered from his wild ways out there," she answered, low and hurriedly. He leaned over and took her hand in his strong clasp.

"Lady, I saw-I understood." "Of course. The whole world saw. How could I help it? He promised me he would not drink a drop if I would come to-day, and never before, since he came home, has he broken his promise to me. God alone knows what a life I live, and before, up to the time mother died and he came home, two years ago, I had been so happy."

"Your brother had been away, then?" "Yes; he went to Australia when I was a few months old, and years later we got news tions I thought he was a far different man from this, and when, after her death, he came home and said the report of his death had all been a case of mistaken identity, I would not believe he was my brother; I thought it was a fraud to get money; but leave the brute where he was and manage he had his papers, and so he really was
