R. L. BORDEN: THE MAN.

An interesting sketch of R. L. Borden, the Oppositor leader, by James Muir, recently appeared in the Canadian magazine. In part, it was as follows:

He is a linguist and a historian, a philosopher and a lawyer, an authority on constitutional questions, well acquainted with the literature of ancient and modern nations and can quote in their own language the best stanzas of the European poets. Withal he is a Christian gentleman to whom there is no keener delight than to address kindly words to the barons of the Sunday School.

As a leader of one of the two great political parties in the Dominion, Mr. Borden is a national figure of whom the people ever want to know more. What are his characteristics? What is his nature? Why doesn't he do this or that? In short what is he? These are questions put frequently to the press correspondents.

An old friend of Mr. Borden once said to me after the Opposition leader had refused to take advantage of an opportunity to attack the government, which would have been entirely unscrupulous: "He is not an opportunist. Thank God for that."

That is his leading characteristic. He is honest and square, and he is dogged and determined enough to stick to any attitude he thinks is right to assume. Nothing will drive him from the right course, however unpopular it might prove to him. He and Mr. McKenna stand under the weight of trouble brought upon him by enforcing principles of rectitude. Mr. Borden's will power is firmer and stronger. When the time comes that the people will call him to power, he will win over every obstacle of such a nature.

To illustrate the integrity of Mr. Borden's character, a story is told by an official of the Justice Department, which is worth repeating. When Sir John Thompson was Minister of Justice, the government was compelled to take action regarding an eastern bank which had gone into liquidation, and he telegraphed Mr. Borden desiring him to act on behalf of the government. "Early as it was in his career," the young barrister I already won the reputation of being the leader of the bar in Nova Scotia. This tempting offer, Mr. Borden refused on the ground that his services had already been engaged by a director of the bank. Sir John, who had a fiery temper, telegraphed some invective, and pointed out in measured terms that it was his duty to obey the call of his country. So serious was the message that the young man hastened to Ottawa by the first train to explain the matter to the Premier personally.

He stated that in his opinion, it would be dishonorable to act for the government as he had been put in possession of information by the bank directors which would not otherwise have been available. He knew their secrets. But Sir John's temper had not cooled and he treated Mr. Borden in the most cavalier fashion, dismissing him with a wave of the hand when he firmly refused to act for the government. However, before he left the city Mr. Borden received a message saying that Sir John Thompson wanted to see him at once. Sir John, affable and kindly, remarked that he had given consideration to his young friend's position in this case. He wished to withdraw what he had said and to commend Mr. Borden for the high sense of honor he had exhibited, and the courage he had shown. Thereafter, until his death, Sir John was one of his warmest friends.

It has been said that he lacks fire in his utterances. This is not the case. I have heard nothing more eloquent in parliament than Mr. Borden's speech-making under the influence of strong indignation of making an appeal to the house to express its legislation its love of country and empire. For example, his speeches during the great naval debate are specimens of splendid oratory. But he does not often give way to flights of oratory. He is too judicial a mind. He is the best lawyer in parliament, a statement which requires little explanation. There might be better pleaders. Hon. A. B. Aylesworth is regarded by many as the best pleader in Canada, but there is the same difference between a pleader and a lawyer as there is between a politician and a statesman. (There might be). Mr. Borden is both a lawyer and a statesman. He argues and he legislates and it is because of this that he is of such immense value to the party he leads. The ability to do so forms the basis of the most successful leadership.

Of course the Opposition leader has his critics. Never yet was there an Opposition leader who was not told that he did not possess the qualifications necessary to make him a premier. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been flung into his care, Sir John Thompson, Sir John Macdonald, Sir James Whitney, had the same experience. Nothing succeeds like success, and the criticisms were forgotten in the applause which greeted their entry into office. So it is to-day with Mr. Borden.

The truth is that Mr. Borden's kindness of heart is sometimes mistaken for laxity. He may be kind to a fault, but if there is discovered to be a fault none can be more unflinching than he. After all the most of the world's greatest men have had the biggest hearts. In his personal habits he is as particular as in his public life. I have seen him after a grueling day's work take a brief pipe with a snuff of angelic peace and he likes it better than the most aristocratic cigar.

CABBAGE IN EXPERT'S HANDS

Common Vegetable Transformed Into A Delicacy.

Herman Senn, the professor of cooking who believes that English cooks do not know how to deal with the potato and cabbage, showed a class of students the other day one of the uses to which the common vegetable of the English dinner table may be put.

Mr. Senn lectures on his art at the National School of Cookery in Buckingham Palace road in a high black cap and long white waist apron. He holds his own among the professors of gastronomic art. Behind him stands a range of cooking utensils, before him a long table upon which he sets the results of his experiments, and on either side of him are white-capped and aproned assistants.

On the farther side of his table 30 or 40 advanced students sit in tiers with notebooks in their hands.

The cabbage with which Mr. Senn experimented was of ordinary cabbage of the markets and stalls of London. In ordinary hands it would have appeared as a greenstuff. This is what the professor did with it:

Shredding the white heart of the cabbage, Mr. Senn set it on one side for his petite marmite soup. He then took half a dozen of the green leaves and proceeded to construct from them a delicate and appetizing hors-d'oeuvre.

First he boiled the leaves in salted water to remove impurities and blanch them. Then he covered them again in a light broth beef or stock. They were then laid out to drain and cool. Meanwhile a vinaigrette had been prepared, consisting of chopped gherkins, chopped capers, and parsley in wine vinegar of the right vinegar, not the malt vinegar of the British cook. With this the cooled cabbage leaves were sprinkled, and then placed between two dishes to absorb for two hours the delicate but pungent flavors of the mixture. "This," said Mr. Senn, "makes the leaf tender and flavors it."

To complete the hors-d'oeuvre, Mr. Senn took a small ham, minced it with a little fat from the beef stock pot, pressed it, and cut into square-edged sticks. Each stick of savory meat was then dipped in the vinaigrette.

Finally the leaf was wrapped around the meat and the whole dipped once more in aspic mixed with the vinaigrette.

When this cabbage de luxe was presented to the class for judgment it was an appetizing morsel, glistening with transparent aspic. It melted in the mouth, leaving behind a delicate puny. It was a true first course, and its main glory was the common cabbage.

NO PAY DAYS.
Many years ago Rev. Thomas K. Beecher wrote the following, which is as true to-day as then: The quiet fidelity with which "she" will dishwash her life away for "him" is a marvel of endurance and grace. Just here is the servitude of one man to another is her work (come that it requires to be done again. Man works up jobs, ends them and takes his pay. This pay can be translated into something else desirable. A man works all day, and draws his pay for his day's work. This pay allows him, as out a horse homebound. Then men work by terms and jobs—and although work is endless as to quantity, yet when cut up into terms and jobs, we men go heartily on our journey and count the milestones.

Not so with our mates. "She" mends our socks, and we put our irreparable toe upon the darned spot, and she darns it again. "She" washes for the family, and the family makes haste to send back the same garments to be washed again. "She" puts the room in order, and we get it ready to be "rid up" again. The same socks, the same washing, the same room every time. She has no successive jobs, no terms, no pay day, no tally-sheet of life.

STREET LIGHTING.
The Record published the changes in the provincial statutes governing local improvements which can be undertaken by a municipality owning its public utilities.

"The extension of a system of water, gas, light, heat or power works, owned by the corporation, including all such works owned by the corporation, including all such works as may be necessary for supplying water, gas, light, heat or power to the owners of land, for whose benefit such extension is provided."

In view of the obtaining of the Niagara power service by Berlin, this city should have street lighting of better quantity and quality. By quality is meant the class of apparatus used in illumination.

To submit a by-law to replace the present system with a better would be to be advisable, yet those streets having a poor lighting service should be in a position to get a better one whenever they desire it. The amendments to the Municipal Act would appear to open the way.

The frontage tax plan is the fairest system so far evolved. The treatment of a given street with regard to its lighting apparatus should not be made to depend upon the influence of its

DOCTOR SAID SHE WOULD DIE

"Fruit-a-tives" Saved Her Life

RIVIERE A PIERRE, QUE., May 9th 1910

"I look upon my recovery as nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years constantly suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Constipation. The last two years of my illness, I was confined to my bed, nearly all the time. I was so thin I weighed only 95 pounds, and I vomited everything I ate. Even water would not stay on my stomach. The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach trouble produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious."

At this time, a lady friend strongly advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives" and how thankful I am that I did so. When I had taken one box, I was much better and after three boxes, I was practically well again and had gained 20 pounds. I have taken thirteen boxes in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am absolutely well—no pain—no indigestion—no constipation—my heart is sound and complexion clear."

citizens with the members of the Council of any year. Petition for what you want and pay for what you get, is the fair way.

It seems to us that were a class of pole and lamps to be adopted for the business streets and another style for the residential streets of the town, that progress would soon be made. The owners would petition for the improvement and pay for it on the frontage tax plan. The town would supply the currents as at present.

Take King Street for instance. It should be a well-lighted thoroughfare. To be in keeping with the modern stores and pavement it possesses the lamps should be of late and approved design. Yet it will be a long day before the rate payers at large will consent to supplying the required apparatus. Were the property-owners, however, to petition for a modern system of street lamps as a local improvement, and such as Waterloo and other neighboring centres are obtaining, the electors who do not reside on King street would approve and follow suit after seeing what an improvement had been accomplished. Light is life and growth.

THE SEWER.

The letter into-day's issue on the Sewer farm, by Mr. D. B. Detweiler, merits a careful reading. He makes a suggestion about the removal of the coating from the sewer beds. This will probably require to be done. But the public will ask: "What is the matter with the septic tank?" "If it is working properly, why is there sludge on beds?" He also agrees that it would be advisable to amalgamate the Water and Sewer Commissions. It is the intention of the town Council to do so, providing the electors give their assent to the abolishment of the present Sewer Commission.

Moth Patches.
Tough the moth patches on your face several times a day with a lotion of 5 ounces of rosewater and 30 grains of chlorate of potash.

AD DOMNULAN SUAM

Little lady of my heart!
Just a little longer
Love me: we will pass the part.
Ere this love grow stronger.

I have loved thee, Child! too well.
To do ought but leave thee:
Nay! my lips should never tell
Any tale to grieve thee.

Little lady of my heart!
Just a little longer
I may love thee: we will part
Ere my love grow stronger.

Soon thou leavest for a land,
Darker grow my tresses,
Soon no more of hand in hand,
Soon no more caresses.

Little lady of my heart!
Just a little longer
Be a child: then we will part.
Ere this love grow stronger.

—Ernest Dowson.
He's Afraid.
A young man, very much excited, hustled into Chief O'Neill's office this morning, and with trembling voice informed the Chief that a fellow boarder had threatened to send him to England in a rough box. The belligerent one has left town, however, and no action was taken.

Concerning a Home Wedding.
It is quite proper to have a march played at a house wedding. The groom should enter first and take his place before the clergyman to await the bride. She is usually preceded by the bridesmaids, flower girl, or other attendants, and enters last, on her father's arm. White gloves should be worn with light silk. Artificial flowers would never do for the bride's bouquet. Better to have none at all.

During the alterations at the Wellington County Jail, the prisoners who have lengthy terms to serve will be accommodated at the Berlin jail to await their removal to either the Central Prison at Toronto or the penitentiary, as the case may be.

The provision list was unaltered, or with gains not exceeding five cents. On the advance all the futures moved in unison and there was active business from the start up to the last part of the forenoon. July ranged from 86 1/2 to 88 3/4, and closed 2 1/2 higher at the best figure of the day.

The Liverpool market closed to-day 1/4 to 1/2 lower than Saturday on wheat, and 1/2 to 1/2 lower on corn. Berlin closed 1/2 lower on wheat, Budapest 1/2 lower, and Antwerp unchanged.
