C. M. B. A.

Join the C. M. B. A. Last week we gave place to an account of an accident which befel one of our brother members in Cornwall. Brother McCabe, in sending us the particulars, enclosed also a few lices of his own in regard to the circum-stance, which we think it well to print in this stance, which we think it well to print in this issue, showing as it does the great necessity existing to be prepared for death at all times and to so arrange our affairs that when the final summons comes those depending upon us will not be left in straitened circumstances. Brother McCabe wrote as folupon us will not be left in stratened creumstances. Brother McCabe wrote as follows:

"Find enclosed clipping from local paper giving an account of the sad accident by which one of our Brother members met with a sudden and unexpected death. By publishing same in your valuable paper it might be some inducement to Catholic fathers whose families are at present unprotected to become members of the C. M. B. A. and avail themselves of the excellent opportunities it affords of protecting our wives and little ones in case we are taken from them when we least expect. I might say that our late Brother Kirvin was a member of the C. M. B. A. about two years at the time of his sad death, carrying a $1,000 policy. It cost him in all allitle over $40 - payed from time to time in small sums, in fact so small that he often admitted to me that he never missed what it cost him to carry this policy; and now, through his forethought in life, his wife and children in a few days will receive $1,000 from the C. M. B. A., in my opinion the soundest Catholic benefit society in Canada."

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

C. O. F.

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 8, 1894.

Sacred Heart Court, No. 201, held their regular meeting Thursday last. In the absence of the C. R. the Vice C. R., Brother John Neander, occupied the chair, and conducted the business of the evening in perfect order. Sacred Heart Court was well represented at this meeting. Several important questions came up for discussion which proved interesting to all and satisfactory to the order. Joseph Cadderate, C. R., of St. Joseph's Court, also Brother Pape, who took an active part in Catholic Forestry, were present. We were pleased to entertain our visiting Brothers, and hope to see them at our meetings often. Notwithstanding the talk of hard times this Court keeps sheadily growing. One more application was handed in, and several will be read at next meeting, which will take place Dec. 20. This will be an important meeting. All members of the Court are specially requested to be present.

Cornwall, Ont.
On last Friday evening St. Columban's Dramatic Club, of this town, presented to the public that highly interesting and pathetic drama entitled "A Celebrated Case." The entertainments given by this club last year were so scceessful and so pleasing to the people that the announcement of the opening play of this season was hailed with general delight, and on the evening in question the music hall was packed, and even additional seating room had to be provided. The drama was quite a heavy one to be undertaken by amateurs, but was most successfully played, and even some experienced critics were heard to say that professionals could not have done better. The drama consists of a prologue in two parts, and the play after an interval of twelve years in four acts. Miss Maggie Cameron, as Madeline, the murdered wife of Jean Kenaud, took a splendid part; and the death scene, together with her preceding terror and agony in trying to save her child, and the jewels committed to her care, was admirably carried out. Miss Violet Cameron as Adrienne, the five year old daughter of Renaud, was simply perfect, and acted her part so pathetically that the audience were almost in tears. Mr. John A. Chisholm, as Jean Renaud, the hero of the play, filled his role to porfection, notwithstanding that it was the most difficult of all. His parting with the child after her evidence had convicted hm, and the recognition and recovery of her after twelve years, was exceedingly touching and natural. Mr. W. V. Boyd as Lazare, the murderer in the prologue, and the Count de Mornay in the play, could not be excelled. In his personation of Lazare he sent shudders of terror through the crowd, and many could scarcely refrain from weeping at the death scene. As the supposed Count, his cool insolence and assumption were unsurpassable. Mr. John McPhee as Dund drawer of the most spirited scenes in the whole play, on their captain, Mr. W. Smith. It was one of the most spirited scenes in the whole play, witty remarks were received with shouts o her duty in denouncing her supp sed father, and her horror at having to do so, was ably carried out. Miss B. Murphy as Adrienne, after the lapse of twelve years, was most pleasing also. She made some very touching points, and the expression of her unshaken belief in her father's innocence was beautifully done. Mrs. Phelan as the directress of the college, was full of the quiet dignity betitting her position and yet lent the part many humorous touches all her own. She is a great favorite on the stage. The role of the Duchess was an extremely difficult one, its importance having to be brought out, not by the part itself, but by the lady taking the part. It was very creditably filled by Miss Emma McDonald. Joseph, the Duke's page, was a very taking little character in the person of Master Willie McDonald. The play was put on in splendid style. The drawing-room scenes at the Chateau d' Aubeterre were beautiful, and the costumes all round were very rich and handsome. The music, rendered by Mr. Fleck's orchestra, was exceedingly choice, and measured with no sparing hand. When the evening closed there was nothing heard anywhere but words of praise and satisfaction with the play and those who took part in it. The sure proof of the success of this play was that while far from being in the least approaching to comedy, it was just as pleasing to the zudience, which it could this play was that while far from being in the least approaching to comedy, it was just as pleasing to the audience, which it could not have been had it not been so brilliantly rendered. The powers of the dramatic club are now well assured, and there is no doubt that anything they may put on in the future will be most heartily received. They deserve encouragement and thanks for their unsparing efforts to do all things in the best possible manner. The funds will be applied to St. Columban's new church, which has gone rapidly ahead, and will be finished next Fall. Even at this stage, when the walls are

Fall. Even at this stage, when the walls are not yet completed, it presents a very imposing appearance. We wish every success to the new church, and to the club working segenerously in its behalf. OBITUARY.

MRS. JAMES KELLY, KINKORA.

The angel of death has again visited our community, and has summoned one of our most prominent parishioners, in the person of Mrs. James Kelly. Her death was due to a severe cold, which developed into pneumonia, and proved fatal, after a short illness. By the death of this lady the Catholic church in Kinkora loses one of its most devoted members. She was always willing to, and did, perform her part in any good work connected with the church. Her husband loses a fond and loving wife; her children, a kind and affectionate nother. It is consistent with human nature to mourn at the death of those most dear to us, but Oh what a consolation to know that the sad parting is at most but for a few short years, where we too will be united with our loved ones where parting is no more.

The heartfelt sympathies of all is tenderly accorded to the stricken ones who now mourn in patience for those whose place in their hearts can never again be filled, but God only can heal the wound which in His wisdom He has made and comfort those in their hour of sorrow and bereavement; and we trust the prospect of another meeting and greeting in the hereafter will assuage their grief and afford consolation to their sorrowing hearts.

She was well and happily prepared, re-MRS. JAMES KELLY, KINKORA.

On Wednesday morning the body was pro-cessionally conveyed to the parish church, where solemn Requiem Mass for the renose of her soul was sung by Rev. Father O'Neill, thence to the cemetery, when the final obse-quies were celebrated. May the loving arms of our holy Redeemer be extended to welcome to His eternal home the soul of Mrs. Kelly! Many when they hear of her death will breathe a prayer that her soul may rest in peace.

MRS. JOHN CORRIGAN, LONDON TP. MRS. JOHN CORRIGAN, LONDON TP.
On the feast of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary (Dec. 8), Charlotte, wife of John Corrigan, of London Tp, and daughter of the late Wm. Nesbitt, passed away, after a short illness, fally fortified by the last rites of Holy Church. As she in life bore trials and afflictions at all times with patience and resignation never flinching from her duties as an ardent Christian lady, the promise has been fully verified, "As ye live so shall ye die." Her life and death were truly exemplary, being attended in her last hours by Rev. Father McCormack, who paid frequent visits and recited the prayers for the dying a few moments before she breathed her last. Her bedside was surrounded by a number of relatives, among whom were two brothers and the ground was soaked in blood. and five sisters.

The funeral took place from the residence of her sister, Mrs. John Henry, 699 Maitland street, on Tuesday morning, at 9 o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral. May her soul rest in MONKS OF ST. BERNARD.

Visit to Their Monastery 8,200 Feet

The Napoleonic pass of the great St. Bernard, between Switzerland and Italy, does not present the difficulties to day that beset the little corporal and his brave army when they journeyed from Martigny to St. Reny in 1804. The widened pathway made by troops has given place in the last three years to a narrow international road. The ride from Martigny to St. Bernard is a long one.

The little lake at St. Bernard is frozen nine months of the year. I must confess that my expectations of the hospice, since I had read nothing of it lately, consisted of hazy childish visions of monks and dogs. I expected to meet but few visitors at the monastery and had no idea that the gentle monks entertain from sixty to eighty tourists a day during the summer. I suppose each visitor feels that it is inconsiderate of the others to be there; at least I did, for the setting of a common place, hustling crowd de-stroys illusions. The hospice consists stroys illusions. The hospice consists of two long stone buildings, set almost at right angles. In one the monks and well-to-do tourists are lodged. The other is for the poor, who are given food only, and allowed to re main but three days. Over this pass one goes directly from Switzerland into Italy, and as any other way is roundabout, nearly all poor travelers walk over the St. Bernard. Most of the travelers in winter are poor workmen carrying home to Italy or Switzerland the scant savings of their sasson's work. An average of ten persons pass daily in winter. Before the invention of the telephone there were many fatal ities, but now the monks are notified of the approach of travelers and go out to meet them. They are almost always picked up from the snow, overcome by cold. RESTORING VICTIMS OF FROST A courteous monk informed me that the usual method of restoring circula-tion was to beat half-frozen wayfarers with heavy sticks. "The sufferers generally beg us to let them die," he "If their limbs are frozen we first rub them with snow for some moments, and then carry the patient to the hospice by putting sticks under their arms and resting these on our shoulders. Then the limbs are treated with a solution of salt and vinegar. All flesh that has been frozen hard decays and is cut away. We kept one man from November till June, and sent him away cured. Our treatment is very successful. Once we sent a man whose feet were frozen to a hos-pital at Aosta, on the Italian side, thinking he would be better cared for there, but the physicians were not as successful as we are, and the patient lost both feet.

It is perhaps too well known to re peat, that the hospitality of the St. Bernard is free, and the visitors leave what they desire to give in a box in the chapel, marked "offerings for the poor." The chapel is richly decorated and has a sweet-toned pipe organ. The construction of this chapel at the precipitous height of nearly 8,200 feet above the sea was the result of much patient, weary labor. Large space is given to it, for it is the pride of the Most of the visitors appear at morning Mass, which lasts from 5 to 8. For one morning it is curious and entertaining, but after shivering in the cold the warmest day of the year was ready to give the monks credit for unusual zeal in attending services in midwinter. A sack clothed attendant told me that monks who say Mass are not allowed to rub their hands, and it frequently happen that their fingers are frozen stiff dur ing the services. No attempt is made to heat the chapel. Wood is expen sive there. It must be brought up the mountain on mules' backs. The monks censole themselves by saying that heat would create a dampness more unhealthy than cold.

The average term of service of a st. Bernard monk is twelve years. At the expiration they are sent to another monastery, generally to Mar-tigny, to die. Their health is al-

DR. EVAN'S OPEN LETTER.

Carefully Investigated by the "Canada Farmers' Sun" — Miss Koester and Her Parents Endorse the Statements Contained in the Open Letter—The Doctor's Action in Making the Facts Public Fully Justified.

From the Farmers Sun

In an open letter published in the "Canada Farmers' Sun" of Sept. 19 over the signature of Dr. Evans, of Elmwood, attention was called to the remarkable case of Miss Christina Koester, of North Brant, who was attended by the doctor in March, 1892, when suffering from inflammation of the left lung, which subsequently developed all the signs of consumption. In June of the same year she wasted to a skeleton, and was suffering from an intense cough with profuse expectoration of putrid matter, accompanied by hectic fever. Her recovery was despaired of until Dr. Evans, at a stage when other remedies had proved valueless, administered Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Within a week the symptoms had abated, and a month after the change of medicine Miss Koester was able to drive to Elmwood—a distance of six miles—and was in good health, except for the weakness occasioned by so long an illness.

The publication of the doctor's statement, of which the above is a condensation, created considerable interest, especially when it was rumored that Dr. Evans was likely to be disciplined by the Medical Council for his action in certifying to the efficacy of an advertised remedy. A representative of the "Canada Farmers' Sun" was commissioned to carefully investigate the matter and ascertain how far the doctor's statements were corroborated by the patient's family. An interview with Christina Koester, her father and mother, was held at the homestead in the township of North Brant. Miss Koester is a well developed, healthy looking girl of eighteen years of age. She stated that she was now in the enjoyment of perfect health and able to do her part in the labors of the farm, and had not since her care had any recurrence of her former trouble.

Tado Koester, father of Christina, said that the scatement as published in Dr. Evans' open letter as to his daughter's recovery was cornect. She was tirst taken sick about the 15th of March, 1893, of inflammation of the left lung, and after treatment by Dr. Evans seemed to recover after about two weeks,

A TOUCHING PICTURE.

Suggesta How General Longstreet was Induced to Become a Catholic.

A very touching picture, now to be seen on Whitehall street, suggests how, it is said, General Longstreet became a Roman Catholic. The picture represents a battery in active service on the battle-field. Some distance away is a Sister of Mercy in her spotless garb of a nurse, resting on another nun, with a musket ball through her breast. Soldiers are gathered about them, looking with pitying glances upon the sorrowful scene. Underneath is written "An Innocent Victim."

During the war General Longstreet had a number of Louisiana regiments in his corps and they were nearly all Catholics. In those fierce battles in Virginia the priests and nuns would go to the front line, where grape, cannister and musket balls were flying thick as shail, and frequently General Longstreet could observe a priest administering extreme unction to a dying soldier far out on the front, where the dead were piled in heaps in the dead were piled in heaps.

Episcopalians Discuss Religious Orders.

One of the subjects of discussion before the congress of the Episcopal Church, which has been in session during the past week in Boston, was that of religious orders. The Bishop of Vermont was strongly in favor of religious orders in the Episcopalian Church, regarding them a great help in religious work and stating that 'after a woman declares she has a call for a vocation of this kind we must accept it as a fact."

Rev. Geo. Zabriskie, of New York, was also in favor of them and claimed that the civilization of many European countries was due to their efforts. majority of the congress, however, opposed the idea of religious orders and contended strongly against the position assumed by the High Church-
