ch larger ratio to the population are food, raiment and shelter. Bountiful nature supplies from her own free hand all else that is needed for our York show. that when the number of persons pro ducing them falls below a certain ratio to the rest of the population, the production will be insufficient and the wants of some will be unsupplied. Under existing social and commercial conditions, not only is the production insufficient, but the distribution is inefficient. We hear of over production of food and clothing, in that city.

A squad of Montreal policemen raided a gambling den on Saturday night, in which were found over thirty prominent citizens.
