"ONE NIGHT AND ITS CONSEQUENCES."

CONTINUED.

In the course of the day, the Governor, with the Rev. F. Ragueneau, came to convey to the seene of the disaster, the Superior of the Ursulines, Mother Mary of the Incarnation, Madame de la Peltrie and Mother St. Joseph.

That smoking heap of stones was a sad spectacle! There had perished, not only the fruit of ten years' solicitude and toil, but also six months' store for themselves and their semisments. and their seminarists, a part of it due to the charity of their friends in France; the charity of their friends in France;—
their provisions for the rest of the winter:
their clothing and beds; the furniture of their chapel and school-rooms;—all, in fine, that they had amassed for the service of the poor Indians, and for their own subsistence; all had been consumed in the space of two hours. Madame de la Peltrie had lost everything, as well as the nuns.

New Year's greetings, so cordial in those early times that even to read of it is refreshing, must have given occasion to many touching expressions of sympathy. The nuns were at least safely lodged, for the time being. Nothing, which the most delicate and ingenious charity could suggest, was omitted on the part of the dear Hospital Sisters to alleviate their distress. During three weeks, with indefatigable zeal, these "friends in need" furnished materials, and aided in putting together comterials, and aided in putting together com-plete suits of apparal for each of the Ursu-

The two communities made but one:— seated at the same table; sleeping under the same roof, and reciting the Holy office together;—but can Ursulines live without having little children around them! Evihaving little children around them! Evidently not. Already the vacant house of Madame de la Peltrie has been examined, and the offer of the good Foundress accepted. *The nuns soon removed thither, bearing with them the generous gifts of their benefactresses; and the not less generous loan of at least 500 livres worth of commodities, pecessary, for a compressery ities necessary for a commencement.

They bore above all and bequeathed to their successors, an inexhaustible fund of gratitude for unbounded hospitality.

their successors, an inexhaustible fund of gratitude for unbounded hospitality.

Among the many marks of sympathy the Ursulines received while they were the guests of the Hospital nuns, perhaps none touched them more than the visit of condolence from their poor Hurons. Assembled in one of the large halls of the Hospital, their chief, Louis Taiveronk, opened his harangue as follows:

"Holy Virgins; you behold here a miserable skeieton, which was once a living, happy people. Our flesh has been devoured by war and famine. These poor bones only held together through your benevolence and compassion. Consider our fate, and you will see that we have every reason to weep for ourselves a torrent of tears. Alas! the friends that kept us from utter destruction have become like us, and their affliction renews all our distress. Must it be said that we have seen that great House of Jesus, the House of Charity, reduced to ashes in a moment? We have seen the fire pursue, without respect, your sacred person! In that conflagration we beheld again our own houses, our towns and country in flames. Alas! must the fire follow the poor Huron wherever he goes? Weep, oh; weep, my brethren, weep with me the misfortunes which have become the portion of these innocent Virgins. Holy Virgins: lo! you are reduced to the same extremity as your poor Hurons, for whom your compassion was so great. You have no more a country, a home, nor a hope but in heaven, where you have placed all your desire.

We have come hither to console you, and before entering this hall we entered your hearts to see what was your greatest affliction in order to seek a remedy. If we were addressing persons like ourselves, our courage; but we see that your courage; but we see that your courage has not failed, and as to tears, you have no safe do not alled, and so to tears, you have no safe do not alled, and so to tears, you have no safe do not alled, and so to tears, you have no safe do not alled, and so to tears, you have no safe do not alled, and so to tears, you have no your tears, and another to restore your courage, age; but we see that your courage has not failed, and as to tears, you have not shed one for your misfortunes. Your eyes are not fixed upon anything lower than heaven, where your treasures are.

Thus, our presents are superfluous. There is but one evil to be apprehended, and that threatens us more than you. It is the effect which the news of this deplorable accident will have upon your friends in France. They will be more touched by it than you are and will call loudly for your return. How can a mother read without tears the letter that will tell her that her daughter is without food or clothing, bed or lodging.—in fine, without any of the comforts of life? The first thought of these poor mothers will be to recall you, that they may have the consolation of relieving your distress. A brother would do the same for a sister; an uncle for his nelect; thus we are in danger of losing you, and of being deprived of the aid we hoped to correct the work of the property of the course. However, in having our daughters is stronger. How your come by the tenderness of your relatives. To fortify your resolutions in this respect, here is a present (a wanquum belt of twelve hundred grants) to fix your feet so firmly on the soft that no love of home or country will be able to remove them.

The second present (another belt) which we beg voul o accept, is to law the week.

nome or country will be able to remove them.

The second present (another belt) which we beg you to accept, is to lay the foundation of another House of Jesus, a House of Prayer, where you may again instruct our children. These are the desires of our hearts; doubtless they are yours also; for you would not the happy if you could reproach yourselves that through too tender a love for your parents you had lost the opportunity of alding in procuring the salvation of so many souls whom you love in God, and who will one day be your "Crown in Heaven."

Doubtless this harangue has lost, by its doubte translation, much of the vivid coloring it had in its native dress: yet it

TO BE CONTINUED. The Dry Goods House of T. Beattie & Co. is one of the finest in Ontario. In this issue will be found the kid glove announcement. Mr. Beattie makes periodical trips to Europe and buys in the best markets. This is one reason why the house has been able to sustain so well for many years its reputation for choice goods

REMOVAL.—John Moule, grocer, announces in this issue that he will remove his grocery on the 1st of December, to the Albion Block, Richmond street. This is Alloin Block, Richmond street. This is one of the most popular family groceries in Ontario. Everything required in this line is always kept in stock, fresh and good and cheap. Customers are treated in the very best manner in every respect, and this is one reason why the store has become so regular among our citizens.

"Is there any medicine taken, or operation performed?"
"None whatever, and the treatment is effect of it being beneficial to the health of the patient."

Mr. Mackintosh, being completely cured, and this is one reason why the store has become so regular among our citizens.

HINTS TO FARMERS.

The business of farming is not only the most independent but it is likewise one of the most profitable when conducted with method and in accordance with well-established systematic rules. Advancement being one of the characteristics of the present age, it behooves every farmer to make use of the best means at hand to economise labor and time. The eld-fashined ways of our forefather will not do in this age of steam age, it behooves every farmer to make use of the best means at hand to economise labor and the results of oueses depends on action and the results of oueses. In these days of labor-saving machinery, the over-tasking of the body with long hours of excessive toil, are not requisites to successful farming, and that farmer who neglects to make use of the improvements and aids which have been produced by mechanical skill and invention to enable him to accomplish, in the least possible time, the greatest amount of labor, must of necessity fall behind in the race for gain. In order, then, that there shall be no excuse for our farmers who may be anxious to occupy places in the ranks of the advanced men of the age, and make use of the best addes to profitable farming, we have taken a circula and improver the lower the most practical and improver the lower the labor productions. On farm fields throughout the land the implements of the Globe Works will be found holding not only their own, but achieving the masteryover all competetors. For thirteen years these works have been manufacturing implements for the farmers, and during all that time in no case have they been found wanting in any respect, nor have they been found wanting in any respect, nor have they been found wanting in any respect, nor have they been found wanting in any respect, nor have they been found wanting in any respect, nor have they been found wanting in any respect, nor have they been found wanting in any respect, nor have they been free to the farmer. In this machine wale will that time in no case have they been foreign the farmer to enable

A REMARKABLE CASE.

The following is copied from the Halifax Evening Mail. Mr. R. B. Mackintosh, a com-nission merchant.came to London some time ago to be treated by Prof. Sutherland for stormer treated.

ago to be treated by Frol. Sutherland for stammering:

If there is any one complaint in the world that has ballled all efforts to overcome it, that one complaint is stammering, or stutter-ing, as it is sometimes called. It is one of the most distressing and painful defects that can embarrass a person in society, and the un-pleasant feeling is not confined to the stam-merers, but also makes it positively painful for those that are compelled to listen while they are making desperate and distressing efforts to speak. Those who are not stam-efforts to speak. they are making desperate and distressine efforts to speak. Those who are not stam merers cannot have any idea of the annoy ance and misery it causes those who are afflicted. What makes it worse is the fact that pretentious quacks calling themselve "Professors" are constantly traveling over the country, victimizing the sufferers out of their money, and in many cases leaving they worse than before. Several instances as known where poor stammerers have paid known where poor stammerers have paid known where poor stammerers have paid in posed on. That at last cure has been discovered is undeniably proven by the fact that one of the worst cases that has ever been known in Halifax—that of Mr. R. B. Makintosh, Commission Merchant, has bee thoroughly cured. Its friends are mor than satisfied with the results of his visit the Institute. A Most reporter had a convex sation with Mr. Mackintosh, the other day and although he watched him closely. I could not detect any impediment. In fact, the state of the contraction of the watched him closely. I could not detect any impediment. In fact, the could not detect any impediment.

the Institute. A Mail reporter had a conversation with Mr. Mackintosh, the other day, and although he watched him closely, he could not detect any impediment. In fact Mr. Mackintosh speaks with greater case and fluency than many who never thought of such a thing as stammering, for the fact that there are very few who speak with that fluency which only comes of a thorough training in elocution. In reply to the reporter's questions, Mr. Mackintosh stated that during the two years the London Institute has been in existence, over 500 cases have been cured—some of these cures being to men over seventy years of age.

"What is the real cause of stammering?" asked our reporter.

"It is a functional derangement of the organs of speech, which renders them incapable, under certain circumstances, of obeying the will," Mr. Mackintosh replied.

"How did your impediment affect you?"

"Sometimes, when commencing, I would get my mouth open and have a volent spasm; at other times my mouth would be spasmodically closed for some moments—in both instances making it extremely painful for me to speak; often leaving me for the time being prostrated and out of breath,"

"It must have been rather paintul for others to listen to you,"

"Yes, very; and often persons, after waiting for some time, would leave me glone, and it was impossible at times for me to make others understand what I was driving at, and generally ending in my stopping altogether."

"Had the weather any effect on your speech?"

"Yes. On damp days I would stammer much woves than on fine days."

"Had the weather any effect on your speech?"

"Yes. On damp days I would stammer much worse than on fine days."

"Have you had any correspondence with others who have been cured to find out if it has been permanent?"

"Yes, I corresponded for nearly four months to find out that very point, and the answers were extremely satisfactory. Persons who had been treated from three to twelve months previously had been thoroughly cured, and several of them wrote that they never thought of stammering."

"Is the cure immediate or gradual?"

"In one case the cure was affected in one hour. Others have gone home after two or three days. In my case, as I was a long distance from home, I remained four weeks to make sure"

"In your case do you find it permanent?"

make sure"
"In your case do you find it permanent?"
"When I first came home I had to watch myself closely, and use considerable force in speaking; now I talk with perfect ease, and am, in fact, speaking easier every week."
"Is the system simple?"
"Very. Any person can lav hold of it, and if possessed of a strong will, and watch themselves closely, can be relieved almost at once."

THE KID GLOVE HOUSE BATHS.

ELECTROPATHIC INSTITUTE, 244 Queen's Avenue, London, Ont.

The first physiological effect of the Moliere Electric-Vapor Baths is to perfect the perspiratory functions of the skin, to give a living and healthy cuticle, instead of the weak, diseased covering which the majority of people possess. The skin is thus fitted for imbibing the oxygen of the atmosphere, and giving off the carbon from the blood—two most important processes. To a person liable to take cold from exposure to slight drafts, the feeling of defiance to cold imparted by the Electric-Vapor Baths is one of the most striking results. In no diseases are the effects more magical than in Rheumatism and Gout In northern climates the functions of the skin are to a great extent dormant, and its purpose as an outlet for refuse matters of the system almost nullified by inaction. The use of these Baths remedies this state of things, giving, at the same time, beauty to the skin and health to the body. Its utility in chronic congestion of the liver and spleen, and in constipation associated with chronic indigestion, gout, inveterate depression of spirits, cutaneous diseases, affections of the kidneys and dropsy thereon dependent, is without doubt. It is common to associate perspiration with debility, and to imagine it to be weakening to the system. This is a mistake, passive means cannot weaken. Travellers in the East resort to bathing establishments for refreshment and invigoration. Electric Vapor Baths are highly tonic, and the rule is to put weak people in often, as it is conducive to flesh and strength. Perspiration drains away no living tissue, but merely effects matter which enervates instead of strengthens. If you perspire well you come out of the Bath stronger than when you went in. This can be tested in three ways; its effect upon those debilitated by disease; on those exhausted by fatigue; and on those long exposed to it. After long and severe fatigue, the bath affords the most astonishing relief, whether it be the fatigue of mental work or of long continued physical labor. MOLIERE ELECTRIC VAPOR BATHS.
