HOMESPUN HEROISM

.... BY C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1902, By the S. S. McClure Company

When Zeb Johnson, Farmer Jones hired man, came to the end of a row of corn, he took a seat on a stump to think things over. He realized that he couldn't glean much consolation from mere thinking, but a crisis was to be faced.

The evening before, after having courted Jennie Taylor, the daughter of another farmer, for a year or more, he' had asked her to marry him and had been refused. Zeb's courting had consisted of escorting Jennie to a Fourth of July celebration, a circus and a cornhusking. The intervals had been filled in by what he called "sitting around" and declaring to himself that she was the sweetest and handsomest girl in all the world. makes life miserable. Can it be cured Yes, in one night. Polson's Nerviline There wasn't the slightest doubt in gives a complete knockout to pain in the back, for it penetrates through the tissues, takes out the soreness and his mind that he loved her, and he was equally sure that he was loved in return. It was therefore with a feeling of supreme confidence in the success of his errand that he had dropped into Taylor's and tried to keep his blushes highly pain-subduing than any other remedy. Don't suffer another minute, get Nerviline quick, and rub it in, for back and his feet on the floor as he said:

"Jennie. I was just thinking that we ought to get married in the fall." "Oh, you were?" she replied, looking up at him. "Yes. I couldn't love you any more if we was to court for five years." "Who's been courting?"

"We have, of course, and I want to must replace the feeling of lassitude "Don't say it," she interrupted. "I and mental tiredness by clearness and strength of mind. Not that it goes directly to the brain, that were foolnever even suspected you were courting. You've been hanging around more

ZEB SAW THE SITUATION AT A GLANCE You are a real good fellow, Zeb, but you are no hero. I think Lucinda Jackson would make you a good wife. Don't blame me, Zeb, and don't get desperate and jump off the barn. I know you want to talk for an hour or two yet, but it wouldn't do any good. Good night, Zeb. The sooner you shine up to Lucinda the quicker you can ask her to marry you." Zeb Johnson went home a stricken man. In a dim way he knew what Jennie sighed for. She was looking for an armored knight to come along on a prancing coal black steed and kill three or four villains and bear her off on his saddle. Zeb had no armor, no coal black steed, no desire to kill. He was simply out of it. He sat on the stump and thought hard, but no consolation came to him. The best thing he could get out of it was a grave under a willow tree, a grave over which Jennie might come and weep when tired of waiting for her knight. "Yes, it shall be death," said Zeb as he rose from the stump. "I'm lop shouldered, knee sprung and hump-backed, and I couldn't be a hero if I was paid a hundred dollars a month. There's nothing left but to hang my-

He went to the barn, procured a rope and started for the woods. He had selected the tree and the limb. In a little glade stood a white beech tree, and there, amid the songs of birds and the rustling leaves of the wild grape, the rope should choke the life out of him and his body should be left to swing in the summer breeze.

While Zeb was after the rope things were happening in that little glade. Three tramps who had broken jail six miles away the previous evening were in hiding, and Miss Jennie had wandered into the woods to study botany and wonder when that armored knight would make his appearance. She was thinking of guerdons and lances and squires and steeds when she confronted the three tough specimens of hu-

Their very first words proved that they were not chevalters. There was nothing suave and gentle and cour teous about the way they ordered her to sit down and keep her mouth shut. She had blundered upon them, and they didn't propose to let her go and give the alarm before they were ready to move on. What with their oaths their vile jokes and their threats she had a bad quarter of an hour of it, and her knight came not.

Zeb Johnson did, however. He came with slow step and downcast head, as s proper when a man is going to hang self. He was thinking of Jennie and wondering if it hurt much to hang oneself. There was a tear in one eye and a gleam of determination in the other when he suddenly appeared before the ragged, dirty trio and their prisoner.

The tramps might have bolted if they had had a minute's warning, but as it was they had to fight. Zeb saw the situation at a glance, and the light of battle flamed up in his face. It is a good thing to go out to hang oneself and find a scrap at hand to postpone matters. It was a fight that uprooted bushes and small trees and plowed furrows up and down the glade, but at the end of ten minutes Zeb was victor and had the three on the earth under his feet. He was still breathing hard and wiping the blood off his nose when a gentle voice wailed out: "Oh, Zeb, Zeb, suppose you hadn't

"But I did come," replied Zeb, "and I guess I've given 'em a licking to last a year. Where was that hero of yours?

"I-I don't know." "Ought to have been around, hadn't "Y-yes-that is, no. No; I don't want him." "Anything happened?"

"Yes. I've got all the hero I want.

Zeb, I'm sorry, and if you want to get married, and if"-"Well, let me kick 'em a few times, and then I'll go home with you and ask the old folks what they think about it. It was lucky I thought of playing the fool and hanging myself."

Purpled the Frenchman. Sergeant Harry, who acted as usher in the White House during Cleveland's second term, told this story: "I will never forget the message President Cleveland sent to Secretary Olney one night. It was this way: There was an eclipse of the moon that night, and President and Mrs. Cleveland were much interested in watching it. 'I don't believe Olney knows about it,' said Mr. Cleveland, 'and he will be sorry to miss it.' Then very quickly, Harry, go telephone Olney to look at the moen. "I went to the phone, and Olney's chef or butler or something French answered. The president sends word to Mr. Secretary to look at the moon,' I said. 'To look at vat?' answered the Frenchman. "The moon," I repeated. 'Ze vat?' again he asked. 'The m-o-o-n,' 'Is ze presiden' in hies mind? 'Yes; he tells Mr. Olney to go look at the moon. Give him the president's message.' 'But vat for iss dat-to look at ze moon?' I then said a word or two and rang off. About an hour later the same butler called us up and, with more density in his tone than even before, said, 'Meestaire Secretary desires to say to Meestaire President zat he hass looked at ze moon, and he iss mooch obliged!"

Didn't Suit Washington. Until the early part of the last century Milford, Conn., had a house in which Washington was said to have spent a night. It was in 1789, when Washington made a tour of New England. Tradition says that there were certain things about his stay at the Milford tayern which he did not enjoy. The supper set before him consisted of boiled meat and potatoes. He was not pleased with the meal and asked for a bowl of bread and milk. The landlord brought the new order and a broken pewter spoon with which to eat it.

"Have you no better spoons than this?" asked General Washington. "It's the best I have in the house sir," replied the host,

"Send me the servant," said his excellency. "Here's 2 shillings. Go to the minister's and borrow a silver spoon." Tradition does not add whether he got the spoon or not.

Describing a Wedding. A young woman clerk at the courthouse was asked to report for the Wellington (Kan.) Mail a wedding that was to take place in the office of the probate judge. Here is her journalistic achievement, otherwise not even the names being given:

"The bride was sixteen years old, wore a short dress and black kid shoes. black dress, red choker, blue velvet hat, with plumes arranged to give a wing effect, crown flat and white rosette in front. The groom was tall, gawky and light complected, wore blue necktie, striped trousers, dark blue barred sack coat, standing collar, black shoes laced upside down, with strings trailing."

Fairly Warned.

An old circus man says that he once arrived at Steelton, Pa., early in the morning to make arrangements for a circus performance at that place. To obtain his license it was necessary to see the burgess of the town. The first person he met was a large, burly Virginia negro, who was on his way ti work at the steel works. He approach ed the fellow and said. "Captain, car you tell me where I can find the bur gess of Steelton?"

"Say, boss, I is a stranger aroun here myself, and all I can say is keep away from dem Burgesses. I was en-gaged to be mahried one time to Mary Elizabeth Burgess, and dey is a peaky
