LITTLE LILLIPUTIAN CASTLE

Seen Among the Mounta N a recent number of St. Nicholas, Ellen Garnett tells of a miniature stone castle in the mountains of Virginia, and hew it came to be built:

While spending the summer of 1897 at Earlehurst, Virginia, amid the wild rugged scenery of the Alleghany Mountains, two young ladies who were fond of exploring the beautiful country, were seated one afternoon at the base of a waterfall. Being deeply impressed by the beauty of the spot, one exclaimed: "How charmingly romantic! I can almost believe that Flora MacIvor will any instant appear seated on that moss-covered rock, dis-coursing sweet music on her harp."

Carried away by such romantic thoughts, they began to build an im-aginary castle, peopled with baron and serf, besieged and defended, of a captive princess and valiant warrior

"Let's make one!" they cried. Accordingly, the next day the undertaking was begun.

A large purplish boulder, overgrown with moses and lichen, on the lawn of Earlehurst, the summer home of the builders, was selected as the site on which to construct this miniature eastle. Building material there were in plenty, but sand and mortar had to be carried for some distance. Tools were limited, and using a screwdriver in lieu of a chisel to enlarge the slight indentation in the foundation rock, which was designed to be the dungeon, proved but slow work.

This task accomplished, a square box was placed over the excavation, in which were cut openings for windows and a door. The windows-eighteen in all-were put together with greatest care, every stout wooden frame being crossed and recrossed with a heavy wire to imitate gratings, then built in the stone walls over the openings. They vary in style and size, from the sarge casements in the protected parts of the structure to the small windows in the watch-towers. After the box had been built over on all sides with rocks, held in place by mortar, another smaller box was placed on top of it, and covered in like manner. Both were first roofed with tin to prevent leaking; but this has been carefully concealed. There are also hidden drains both in the castle and causeway. The towers are built solid, except behind the windows, where spaces are left to give the effect of rooms. After four months of not un-interrupted labor the castle was finished. One of the architects carved little figures out of wood, and dress-ed them to represent the household of a baron. The knights are clothed in tinfoil armor, each carrying a lance and battle-ax; all the ladies are arrayed in brightly colored silks. An armed sentry stands on guard in each watertower, and a captive princess peeps through the bars of a lofty casement, imploring aid from every brave feet and a half, and the rock on which it stands measures ten feet in circumference, and is three feet high. The approach to the castle is by a causeway rising gradually from the ground of wall until it reaches the entrance gate, where it stops abruptly. Acrose the space between the castle walls and the causeway is thrown a drawbridge, which can be raised or lowered by its iron chains at a moment's notice. On the platform of the causeway stands the handsomely caparisoned war-steed of a knight who has just dismounted to pay his respects to the lord and lady of the castle. They wait to receive him at the entrance gate, surrounded by their household retinue. A diminutive page, clad in silken doublet and hose, stands at the horse's bridle, while beyond the courtyard can be caught a glimpse of the fools motley. The banner which floats from the highest tower, has the armorial bearing, or, a lion rampant, gules, that is, a rampant red lion on a yellow field. The same standard awaves proudly over the great gate.

The castle's height is about two

WHY HE LIKED AMERICA Rev. Mr. Crowe Compares Some Am

The Rev. W. S. Crowe of the Church of the Eternal Hope, West Eighty-first street, New York, preached last Sun-day on the subject: "Why I Like America Better." The sermon embodnational life with that of America. Mr. Crowe has spent the past three months in Europe. He said in part:

"This is an age of fault finders opposed to national ambitions, of those who sigh for 'the good old times,' and seem to believe that the last days have come and that politics, religion and business are going down hill. My purpose this morning is to measure a few home things which we are in the habi of criticising, with things in other countries. Let me speak first of American and other newspapers. I heard the president of one of our great universities, not long ago, say that the country was being hurled into a political and moral abyss by the sensational lies of the American press. You will appreciate the worth of American newspapers when you have struggled with what they call newspapers in other countries. They have not learned abroad to procure news. All summer the British and Continental press quoted the latest Chinese word from the American press. The Americans live all over the earth; the people of other countries have only a local habitation. Our newspapers have trained us to cosmopolitan habits of thought. They waken our minds, and mutual awakening means moral awakening.

"A word on politics in America and elsewhere. We are in danger of becoming blind to the virtues of American politics. There is no greater danger in our country than the widespread suspicion of every one in office. Our anodern presidential campaigns are unspeakably cleaner than a political campaign anywhere else. It is the business of our politicians to take up an issue and make the people familiar with it. They teach the meaning of money, trusts and business combinations. In England a campaign means vituperation. Here are some headings copied from prominent English political papers: "That Old Hypocrite, Salisbury;" "The Villains of the Rosebery gang:" 'Chamberlain's Lies, Old and New.' I felt that I had stepped into a higher civilization when I saw in this country political foes treating each other with personal respect. A political campaign in France or Italy is a thing for mortals to blush at and for angels to weep

"As to American and foreign moralfty: Here it is the unwritten law among the humbler classes that women who are otherwise respectable shall not frequent the saloon. Abroad that barrier is broken down; the lower classes in the cities are debauched drunkards, repulsive in appearance. Here they are healthful in looks and apparently decent. The problem with us is to keep American mothers, of every class, healthy, intelligent, and pure. me: This is true of Paris-it is the most artistic, the most cultured, the most conscienceless, the most fatally depraved city on the face of the earth. The government has adopted the cultivation of vice as a business policy." New York, by contrast, seems to me to be almost puritanical, a safe and wholesome city in which to rear chil-

"Oh, I mean a steel and rubber kind. In other words, a phonograph?" "Vot do it do?" "Sings and talks. I have here a $10

"Yes, songs. I have twelve in this case. Six are for you and six are for another ustomer. Yours are all selections of the fatherland. Listen!" The suave young man placed the cylinder in position and then wound up the machine. There was the usual prelimi-nary clicking and then the clear strains "Watch on the Rhine" drifted from the fumed. Herr Hopf was charmed. So was the frau, who left her soups to hear a beloved melody. They heard the renaining five airs and then the outfit became the property of the Teuton

"Thanks," said the suave young man, as he gathered up the remaining cylinders, "I am going down to my other customer."

A few hours later some friends of the Hopf family called and the phonograph was proudly adjusted to render the beloved air. But instead of "Watch on the Rhine," there came the hearse voice of some one singing "The Wearin" of the Green." In the uproar came the suave "Give me those records!" he shouted.

"I got them mixed and took all of those German songs down to Murphy's saloon They've sent in a riot call."

An old gentleman when passing a litorner remarked: "Are you not afraid you will catch cold on such a wet night, my little female organism, it is only a question of time until the general health becomes undermined. Nervousness, sleeplessness time until the general health becomes undermined. Nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and "sinking spells" produce suffering almost indescribable. There can be no restoration of the general health until the local health of the womanly organism is re-established.

"You would be surprised if you could have seen me when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's medicine and could see me now." writes Mrs. Isaac S. Harris, of Gayville, Yankton Co., So. Dakots. "I had no appetite, was completely run down. Have had stomach trouble for years and was so nervous I could not sleep. We have spent a lot of money doctoring, but there was not one thing that I took that did me any good, except for a short time: till I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Golden Medical Discovery. In three days after I commenced taking his medicines I could see a change for the better, and from that time I have steadily been getting better. Can walk or ride to any place I want to, and I feel like a new person. Since taking Dr. Pierce's medicines I can sleep all night and never get up tired in the morning; can eat anything and it don't hurt me."

Mrs. Ewing and Her Fish Pan. Mrs. Emma P. Ewing, dean of the Chautauqua Cooking school, tells of one saddening experience when she first began housekeeping. The art of cooking was unknown to her, and she looked forward with terror to the first visit of her mother-in-law, who was a famous house-wife. She arrived, and Mrs. Ewing began to serve dinner. The first course was a fish, which she had baked in a pan. When she tried to lift it, she was at her wits' end. It stuck to the pan here, there and everywhere.

At last the fish was removed by the aid of a carving knife, a fish slice, a spoon and a griddlecake turner. It was too broken to serve on the platter, so the young cook, with tears in her eyes, made ermined, however, to find a better pan termined, however, to find a better pan for baking fish. There was nothing of the kind in the stores, so she got an in-telligent tinsmith to carry out her ideas. She had a piece of sheet iron cut to fit loosely into a shallow bake pan, and at each end of the tin she had long handles attached. When thoroughly greased, the fish baked on it is perfective all the interfish baked on it to perfection, all the juice being held by the pan. It was child's play to slip a thin, long knife under the fish when lifted from the pan and slip it

Honey For the Toilet. Apart from the medicinal uses to which honey is and may be applied are those connected with the toilet. A small jar containing honey should be kept on every washstand and in every nursery. Honey proves a panacea for most of the ills that flesh, or, rather, skin, is heir to in the shape of cracked lips, roughness of the skin, blotchy patches around the mouth, which are most disfiguring to even the most beautiful, chilblained or chapped hands, sore and cracked heels, wind caught ears, etc., which can all be prevented by this simple remedy. application is easy, and no one can object to it, as they do to so many other remedies. After washing any part of the body suffering from any of the above body suffering from any or the above unpleasantnesses, apply to the part affected, while still wet, a very little honey by dipping the finger into the jar and smearing over.
