British soldiers only worry now in possible over optimism of civilians because of their recent successes and those confidently expected in the future. They realize that the Germans are not yet beaten and that a long and arduous task still confronts them.

Gas Lighting.

Possibly, the feature of incandescent gas lighting most fre casual observers is the great ease with which tasks, ordinarily arduous under artificial light may be perform ed under the Welsbach gas mantle The light has a peculiarly "soft" quality, difficult to describe, but which is readily recognized by those who have had experience with the gas mantle health and comfort, the use of incan-descent gas lighting is decidedly fav-orable. The currents of air set up by the burning gas improves ventilation tending to expel the air vitiated by on and draw in fresh air replace it. Harmful or dangerous disease germs are instantly destroyed in the flame. The extent to which this effect takes place may be verified by placing a gas lamp close to a ceiling without any provision for interfering with the up-rushing air currents. The charred particles which collect immediately above the lamp are the remains of dust particles which before passing through the flames were laden with germs and microhes. en with germs and microbes. experiments have shown that the burning of gas lamps in rooms previously containing bacteria, resulted in absolute sterilization of the air.

Contrary to the popular notion the temperature of rooms lighted by incandescent gas lamps is seldom markedly greater than under incandescent electric light, even under unfavorable conditions of ventilation, while in coms provided with the ventilating acilities required by the demands of price 40c. each. d rooms is frequently lower.

Germans Happy in Ginchy Battle.

Munsters and Dublins Had a Feast of Hand-to-Hand Fighting — German Losses Heavy—Kaiser's Men Struggled to the Last, Battallons Being Cut to Pieces—"You Old Damned Well," the Brigadler General's London, Sept. 11.—The Irish troops who captured Ginchy seldom had a more acceptable task, telegraphs a correspondent at British Headquarters in France. The assault of this well fortified village was the kind of fighting the Irish like, bayonet thrusts, close range bombing, plenty of hand-to-hand struggles in narrow trenches. "There were fewer breathless rushes after panic stricken fugitive Germans," says the despatch, "than when Guillemont was taken. The Germans at Ginchy stood up to the Irish and did not turn tail. It was a good fight, but the Irish won it.

"They found Ginchy far better defended than they had expected. The the incessant strain of lying in the open under a galling fire the men were so keen to take part in the attack that the lightly wounded pleaded to be allowed to stay. Three servants at the lieadquarters behind the firing line disappeared on Friday night and were found afterward on the firing line. One of them left a note saying:

"'I missed Guillemont and I must be the little men towering above them head and shoulders, dirty, unshaven, hungry, thirsty, weary, but triumphant. triumphant.

Four Men Hold Gap.

"A very courageous feat was performed by four volunteers, a sergeant, two corporals and a private, of the Munsters, who occupied a 300 foot gap of trenches from which our men had been driven, and after clearing it of the enemy with a machine gun remained until relieved three hours later.

"Immediately the heart of the village was reached by the Dublins the Germans in a trench running from its western end to the centre promptly surrendered. Those in the cellars and dugouts kept up a stout resistance. Some Bavarians emerged from cover to engage in close quarter fighting. Snipers hidden in trees and behind piles of broken bricks had to be dealt with singly. One man had climbed the stump of a shattered tree and tied himself fast preparatory to picking off contrary—and in various ways had shown themselves unworthy of de-ent treatment. "I was told of a Cork man who was staggering to a dressing station hold-ing his bandaged head when a Ger-man lying in a crater with a number of others shot him and killed him. Every man in this company of as-sassins was killed in retaliation. Oth-er Germans fired at the Irish at close quarters and then held up their hands. Some held up their hands first and then fired point blank. Such conduct had the inevitable result of acreasing the German casualties.

There were exceptions. A woundneir regiment at Mons and all through allipoli were killed at Ginchy. Some Ferrozone is a wonderful combination of vegetable extracts, fortified by excellent tonics for the nerves and stomach.

When you feel despondent, Ferrozone weigh the liveliest scrimmage they had seen since Suvia Bay. Without exception they declared they preferred the Turk to the boche. They were a motlay crowd, with all shades of political faith represented; Redmondites, Sinn Feiners and a big Larkinite drummer slept peacefully side by side."

The "Ruins of London"

(Birmingham Post.) German prisoners, buoyed up by the airy imagination of the Wolff Bureau, are sadly disillusioned, it seems, when they find that London still stands where it did. Several days ago a wounded officer arrived at Charing Cross, manifestly cheered by the prospect of seeing London largely in ruins. His first disillusion was at the terminus itself, which he had been told was a shapeless mass; and, as he passed through Trafalgar Square and towards the West End, and his British guard in answer to repeated questionings pointed to building after building which the unverscious Wolff had declared to be destroyed, his gloom grew deeper, and he seemed a stricken man. If a man of his education and posi-tion could have been so grievously de-ceived, what of the masses in central dermany, whose powers of belief i sychological factor in the war?
