CLANDESTINE LOVE LETTERS

If there is anything that is dear to a girl's heart it is a love letter—that is, if she is in love with the man who penned it.

The younger and more romantic a girl is the more store she sets by these words of endearment which appeal so eloquently to her.

There are two kinds of love letters, the one from the author whose wooing meets with the earnest approval of the girl's relatives and the other by the man who is given to extraordinary secrecy in wooing. The latter does not desire the world to know of the secret attachments that have sprung up, and he usually resorts to clandestine correspondence.

Many an impulsive young girl has been forbidden to hold any communication with an undesirable young man. The obedient girl yielded to the wishes of her counselors. The wilful girl takes the reins in her own hands—listens to her lover's advice to rent a box in the postoffice, thus allowing them to correspond to their hearts' content without the knowledge of a third party.

She who complies with this takes the first step on the road of a dangerous path.

The postmaster of Rushing, L. L., leads the reform in crushing out this system. He has given out the following statement: "Girls who try to rent boxes in the postoffice hereafter to carry on their correspondence will be questioned closely." The postmaster declared himself in favor of having the general delivery of letters to persons who have a residence address.

"Whenever I know the parents of a girl I include the letters addressed to her in a separate cover and mail them to the parents' address. Sometimes I visit the relatives and enlighten them as to the situation. If this stand should be taken by all postmasters, many a young girl might be saved from taking the first steps in a career of folly."

The growing importance of the situation may be imagined by the following letter, which is one of many I received upon the subject.

"Dear Miss Libbey: I have a lover whom I adore with all my heart. My folks disapprove of him because he is so unfortunate as to not find work. Occasionally only he gets on a spree. They have forbidden him the house and kept me within doors. Several times when I had an engagement to meet him outside he suggested that I get a letter box, that we may write to each other unbeknown to others. He hints that we may plan an elopement some future day. Please write me if you think we would be found out. HELEN."

I am glad this little girl has written to me in the nick of time, as it were. I make my words a prayer to her to break off at once with this man who urges her to be untrue to those who love her, they having only her good at heart. Avoid all secret love intrigues if you would have a happy future. Girls who are immediately benefited by this wrongdoing bitterly. They rarely turn out well.

Insists on Making Engagements

"Dear Miss Libbey: Please do tell me what to do under these circumstances: I am in a terrible predicament. Among my acquaintances I have a young man who is always insisting on making engagements with him. I have never been with him except with my girl friends along. He has turned down a number of times, but he always asks me again the next time he gets a chance. I admire him very much, although I have known him only about six months. My main reason for not going with him is that he chums with two boys whom I dislike and has gone with a girl with whom I do not associate."

"Shall I tell him this, or merely 'turn him down' again as before?"

If you are not interested in him refuse all invitations he extends to you.

"Say, for Instance"

"Dear Miss Libbey: Say, for instance, a girl met a young man of whom she had heard a great deal from her friends, at a social gathering, and then exchanged a few words and next day were invited to join an excursion trip. After spending the day and evening together, and parting and next, should the girl, after both had agreed an enjoyable time was spent together, ask the young man to call when in town again, or should he ask for the privilege of calling?"

"How long should a couple be engaged before getting married?"

Miss Libbey won't write an article on flirting, why girls should not, and examples of such? Should a girl go with two or three boys at about the same time? "CLIFF."

It is a woman's privilege to extend the invitation to call. The length of one's engagement is governed by circumstances. Usually it is not longer than a year.

Catching Heart on Rebound

"Dear Miss Libbey: I have often heard that there was many a heart caught on the rebound. Is this true? I loved a man for seven years, and thought there was no other in all the world but like him, but found out that he was not true to me, that he was not fond of me, and so selfish that he kept telling me that his love was sincere. After waiting seven years for him I decided to give up all thought of him and put him entirely out of my life and mind. This happened a year ago. Since then I met a gentleman who fell desperately in love with me. He has everything to offer a wife and is sterling through and through. I like him very much and find myself looking for his letters and calls. Still I don't love him like I did the first one. Do you think I can love him as a wife ought to love her husband?"

"I do not wish to encourage him unless I could give the same love to him as he offers to me. I have told him of my affair No. 1 and he says he loves me enough to make me overcome it. I have overcome it, but the question is, can one love twice, and is it 30 years too old to marry?"

"DOUBTFUL"

Who would want to catch a heart on the rebound? Indeed, one can love twice, and three times, and four times, and five times, if necessary.

Not Allowed to Go With Fellow

"Dear Miss Libbey: I am fifteen years old, but I am not allowed to go out at night, except on Sundays, and I have to be in at ten o'clock, and I am not allowed to go with fellows. Do you see any harm in going out for a walk on Sunday afternoons with one of my friends? I told my mother, and she didn't say anything, but father says I'm too young. You said in one of your letters that young people should wait till they get through

COMING TO CALGARY

The Representative of the Pennsylvania Ear Masseur Engine —
The Scientific Cure for Deafness — Free Demonstration at Grand Union Hotel — Four Days Only

The only practical and scientific cure ever invented, the principles of vibration having been established and the power reduced to a point where the vibration benefits and cures deafness. Scientific study of the various methods used and the effects produced have led to the development and final perfection of the Pennsylvania Ear Masseur.

The basic principle of the Masseur is the forcing of the air into the external ear by compression and automatically withdrawing it by suction, thereby creating mechanical vibration.

By this action is brought to bear upon the drum membrane and the nerve bond attachment of the ear, the result being that the paralyzed muscles that control the sensitive organs of the ear are immediately benefited.

In scientifically producing this stimulation and mechanically controlling it, the Pennsylvania Ear Masseur has solved the problem of deafness. This instrument is not to be classed with other appliances, devices or treatments. It stands in a class by itself. It is not a drug remedy, nor a temporary relief scheme remedy. It is practical, scientific and brings the best possible results in the quickest time, and its cures are permanent.

The manufacturers of this Masseur Engine, have all other manufacturers, having great and valuable treatment, been persuaded to offer it direct to the public, since the individuals can operate it for themselves as satisfactorily as the specialist, and save the doctor's fee every time he uses it. The engine can be operated by hand, by city water, by compressed air, or by any other motor power.

Mr. Landry, American and Canadian representative of the Pennsylvania Ear Masseur, offers, without cost, an opportunity to test for or receive a wonderful curative powers of the Pennsylvania Ear Masseur and Vibratory Engine, at the Grand Union Hotel, August 17, 18, 19, and 20.

school before they go with each other. Well, I left school and started to earn my living two years ago, because circumstances forced me to. Please answer me this question: "MINNIE P."

Your father is right. Even if you did quit school at thirteen because of circumstances, you are entirely too young to go walking with young men. Try and see if there isn't something you can still learn, even if you have left school.

Taking Men to the Theatre.

"Dear Miss Libbey: Will you kindly advise me if it would be proper to ask a gentleman friend of mine to escort me to the theatre, as I often have tickets given me, but did not know whether it would be perfectly proper to ask him to take me?"

Yes, it would be proper. I don't approve much of a girl furnishing theatre tickets for men. I would suggest that you ask some girl friend to accompany you. Instead of a man. Most men get the idea of asking them to accompany them instead of a girl. Most men get the idea of asking them to accompany them instead of a girl. At Present Delivering Groceries

"Dear Miss Libbey: I am in deep trouble. I am a young man of average height, of fair complexion, and am very handsome. All the girls are crazy about me. In fact I think that several of them are deeply in love with me. Two of them I love to return. One of these always wants me to take her to the moving picture shows and theatres, while the other always wants me to call on her and she never wants to go out. Although the latter, I think, loves me most, I can have more fun with the former. What shall I do? I am at present delivering groceries, consequently I receive a small salary. Do you think it would be wise to marry?"

H. E. W.

I hope you never have any deeper trouble than that you write about. With the one you are most interested in, it would be better for yourself, however, if you would leave the girl entirely alone "for the present" and try to make something of yourself. Don't be squandering your miserable salary on them.

"Please help me out of this trouble, for I am determined to marry her, even though my mother says she will not consent to marry with many other unpleasant things. What can I do to please mother and at the same time have the girl who means everything to me?"

CORRECTION:

You would be foolish to rush into a marriage of this kind. If you really love the girl there is no reason why you should not wait a year or two before marrying her.

No matter how deadened, paralyzed and dormant are the nerves of the ear, no matter how thick the drum membrane may be, or how completely it may have fallen, or how securely the little bones of the ear have grown together, this instrument will vibrate them into inflexibility, stimulate the drum membrane to tenacity, force into action the muscles controlling the bones of the ear, thereby rendering the ear sensitive to sound.

TWO-PIECE CORSET COVER

For anyone who is given to wearing out the under arm sections of her pretty corset covers before any other part shows any sign of giving out, the corset cover made in two pieces, joined only at the shoulder seams, is a wonderful comfort. It is not at all troublesome to make, and quite as much dainty hand work can be lavished on it as on any other shape of cover.

If a regular pattern cannot be had—and they are not easy to find—choose one intended to slip over the head and fold in the back section until it makes a plain fitting backpiece, or else evolve the pattern from the simple fitted back and slightly flared front one by cutting with the front edge on a fold to make one piece. Instead, however, of following the usual under arm line, in either back or front, the side of the back under arm must be cut curving well toward the front as it comes down to the waist line, and the front with its curve well toward the back. To be more explicit, the back and front sections are made with their under arm edge finished and curving so that from across back to "surplice fashion" under arm when the garment is put on.

This makes what would otherwise be an "armhole" into an opening tapering to a point under each arm, and these are so trimmed with narrow lace, sewed on flatly, sufficiently far down to insure trimming of the entire "hole."

The lower edges of both front and back are finished with casings, in which ribbons or linings tape should be run, and in putting on the ends from the backpiece are tied in front, first, and then the front ends are tied in the back. The garment does not extend below the waist line.

The upper edge of the front section must be shirred to a heading, and must be long enough to allow the corset cover to be slipped over the head.

In fact, in most of these pretty garments the heading, the lace which trims the neck edge and that edging the arm openings are all that cross the shoulder, giving a very nice strap effect. If this be done it is wise not to extend the armhole edging until last of all, to save possible error in the length of lace allowed for it.

These corset covers, by the way, are unusually easy to iron—a point which will make a strong appeal to many wearers. The prettiest finish for the front section is to give narrow insertion set in curving patterns or in straight lines running either up and down or around the upper part; but hand embroidery of any description appropriate for underwear can be adapted for use on this most convenient little piece of lingerie.

AMERICAN SHIPS MAY GO THROUGH CANAL FREE

at trust or railroad control of steamships. The first by Senator Reed would prohibit ships owned by an illegal industrial combination from using the canal and the second by Senator Bourne would force railroads to give up water lines that might otherwise be the competitors. If it were proved that they were suffering competition, Opponents of the free toll provision for American ships against which Great Britain made formal protest, carried their fight up to the last moment of the bill's consideration. Just before its passage, Senator Reed moved to strike out the section giving free tolls to American ships in the foreign trade. Both of these motions were defeated by overwhelming votes. As the bill passed it would permit American coastwise vessels to pass through the canal free, without conditions, while American foreign trade ships might pass through if their owners agreed to sell their vessels to the United States at a fair price in time of war or emergency.

In the form in which it returns to the house, the bill offers to the general scheme for operating the Panama canal provisions for the admission to American registry of any foreign built ship owned by Americans, provided they are operated wholly in the foreign trade.

Senator Brandegee closing the debate, insisted that the provisions of the senate bill, admitting vessels engaged in the foreign trade, to free passage in the canal, was an undoubted violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty with Great Britain.

He opposed also the Williams amendment admitting American registration, provided they did not engage in coastwise trade.

"It has been proposed that this would help build up American merchant marine," he said. "To my mind it would be a humbling spectacle for Americans to see ships travelling around the world under the American flag with the label 'Built in Germany' attached to them."

Feeling in Vancouver.

Vancouver, Aug. 9.—Angered by the action of the United States senate in discriminating in favor of American vessels in formulating rules for the conduct of the Panama canal, British Columbia will probably boycott the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco in 1915.

A. B. Beattie, president of the Vancouver board of trade issued a statement today. "A special meeting of the board of trade will be called to discuss whether the people of this city and province will withdraw from participation in the San Francisco fair, less that the British government is considering a similar course."
