

TANGLED THREADS

The arrangement for the marriage was as follows:—At half-past seven o'clock, Arthur, Ellen, and Mrs. Cumberland would enter the little church by a private door, and the ceremony would take place. Richard North was to have given her away, but that was over now. Arthur held the license; he had made a friend of the clergyman, and all would be done quietly. He and Ellen were to go away for a few days; she would then return home with Mrs. Cumberland, and be to the world still as Miss Adair. After that, Arthur would take his own time, and be guided by circumstances for declaring the marriage; but he must, if possible, do it at once introduce Ellen to his aunt, Miss Bohn.

And Ellen Adair! Not a scrap rested on her mind, not a doubt or hesitation on her heart: her father had given his cordial approbation—as expressed in the letter to Mrs. Cumberland—and she was full of peace.

"Did you feel that, Ellen?"
A faint, quivering breeze had seemed to pass over them with sudden sharpness, and to die away in a moment, and disclosed a world of white sail on sea and land, and the boats turned homeward.

"We had better be going, too, my love; or we may have it upon us."
She rose and spoke, and they walked away. The sky was growing darker; the shades of evening were beginning to gather. Mrs. Cumberland had been lying down and was dressing, the maid said—Miss Captain Bohn would wait. Ellen took off her bonnet and mantle.

"Whilst we are alone, let me see that I have not made a mistake in the size, Ellen."
Taking from his pocket a bit of tissue-paper, he blew it, and then he tried it on. "I thought," she timidly began, "that you meant this to be my wedding-ring!"—indicating the plain gold one she had usually worn on her right hand.

"No, Kane bought that one. This will be mine."
It fitted exactly. Captain Bohn had not allowed for the probability of those fragile fingers growing larger with years. As he held it on for a minute, their eyes met. Ellen suddenly recalled that long-past day in Dailory Church, when she had taken off Maria Wane's ring for Bessy North, the sister-in-law in the curfew, when Arthur Bohn put the other one on, and his sweet words; lastly, the scene in the garden when he put it on again. This was time the third.

"If this should ever become too small for me," she murmured, as he took it off the finger.
"Oh, but that—if ever—won't be for ages and ages."

Not for ages and ages! If, in their innocent unconsciousness, they could only have seen the cruel fate that was already coiling its meshes around them!

The storm did not come that night. But whether, in revenge for the delay, it chose to extend itself with double violence, certain it was that such a storm had seldom been seen at Eastsea, as ragged in the morning. The sky was lurid and angry; the sea tossed itself in great waves; the wind whistled and shrieked; the rain dashed furiously down at intervals; all nature seemed at warfare.

In much distress lay Mrs. Cumberland. Exceedingly subject of late to outer influences, whether it might be from the sea, or the cruel fate that was already coiling its meshes around them!

these next few minutes. Madam spoke of the telegram that had been received at Dailory. She said—giving to matters her own coloring—that James Bohn was in extremity; that he only waited to see Arthur to die; that he was asking for him; not a moment was to be lost. She had hastened to London on receipt of the telegram, and had now come down to fetch him.

"Step in, Arthur. We must catch the quarter-to-twelve train."
"I cannot go," he answered.
"Not go!" screamed madam. "But I command you to go. Would you disobey the last wishes of a dying man?"

Well, no; he felt that. "A quarter to twelve!" he said rather dreamily. "You must wait, madam, whilst I speak to Mrs. Cumberland. There's plenty of time."

He went in with his tale, and up to Mrs. Cumberland, as one in a dream. He was forced to go, he bewailed, but not for more than a day, when he should be back to complete the marriage. What could she answer? In her bewilderment, she scarcely understood what had happened. Leaping downstairs again, he closed the door of the sitting-room upon himself and Ellen, and closed her heart.

"My darling! But for this, you would have been on your way to become my wife. Come what may, Ellen, I shall be down again within a few hours. God bless you, my love! Take care of these."

They were the ring and license; he handed them to her lest he might lose them. Before Ellen could recover herself, whilst yet her face was glowing with his farewell kisses, he was being rattled away in the fly with madam to the station.

Warning to Young Men.
How many young men bankrupt their constitutions, squander their vitality and ruin their health by pernicious practices generally contracted through ignorance. Nervous exhaustion, debility, dulness of mental faculties, impaired memory, low spirits, morose or irritable temper, fear of impending calamity, and a thousand and one are the arrangements of mind and body which result from such indiscretions. Epilepsy, paralysis, softening of the brain and dread of insanity are not unfrequently the result of indiscretions and unnatural habits, contracted in youth, through ignorance of their destructive character, and persisted in until the constitution is wrecked! Such unfortunate cases are surely entitled to the tender sympathy, the noblest efforts and the best skill of the medical profession. To reach, reclaim and, whenever possible, to restore such sufferers to health and happiness is the aim of an association of medical gentlemen, who, having had a vast experience in the treatment of the diseases hereinafter hinted at, have prepared a scientific treatise, written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability of such diseases. The World's Dispensary Medical Association, of 665 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y., will, on receipt of this notice enclosed with 10 cents for postage, mail, secure from observation in plain sealed envelope, a copy of this useful work, which should be read by not only every young man in the land, but also by every parent, guardian and teacher having the care of the young.

Death's Door.—Dyspepsia Conquered.—A Great Medical Triumph. GENTLEMEN.—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live, when I commenced the use of Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 210 to 110 pounds. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the VEGETABLE DISCOVERY consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over 30 dozen VEGETABLE DISCOVERY since it cured me, as a well-known, and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life, as I never expected to recover when I first commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimony and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia. Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is earache. "WOOL" the opprobrious epithet which the Chinese apply to the Japs, belongs to an interesting class of names bestowed upon nations by more or less unfriendly neighbors. Such names are found in all parts of Europe. The name Welsh is merely a Teutonic for foreign people, and in America the people who called themselves Dakotas were known to their neighbors, the Ojibwas, as Sioux or "enemies." It is said that the word Esquimaux is a French corruption of the Chippewa or Cree phrase Ushkimoog, or "rawhide eaters."

COAL is made up of the remains of trees and plants which grew on the earth before man or any other mammal had appeared. Changed by pressure, heat and dampness, this mass of vegetable matter has become a kind of carbon, mixed with bitumen, or tarry substance, which are always made in slow decay of such matter. Anthracite, stone coal, sometimes called glance coal, account of its shine, has the least bitumen in its bituminous coal has in it much more bitumen than anthracite, and cannel coal contains more bitumen than either of these.

A Terrible Experience.
Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Staffordville, Ont., pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy Medical Discovery and the Cutaneous remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. I came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say that I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine."

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Fitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Fitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fitcher is on every wrapper.
