CHAPTER III. "From Miss Rolleston, at Cap Ferrino, to Mrs. Rolleston, in Beresford street. Walworth. "How I wish you could see this place, dearest; the blue sky, the clive woods, the orange and lemon orch-ards between the cliffs and the seasheltering in the hollow of the great hills—and with summer waves dancing up to the narrow ridge of pebbles and weeds which is the Italian idea of a beach. Oh, how I wish you could see It all, mother dear, and bask in the sunshine, that makes it so difficult to believe the date at the head of the November! The air is like an English June-the sun is so hot that I can't walk a few yards without an umbrella. And to think of you at Walworth while I am here! I could cry at the thought that perhaps you will never see this lovely coast, this that bloom in winter. There is a hedge of pink geraniums under my window, ther-a thick, rank hedge, as if the flowers grew wild-and there are Dion roses climbing over arches and palisades all along the terrace—a rose garden full of bloom in November! Just picture it all. You could never imagine the luxury of this hotel. It is nearly new, and has been built and decorated regardless of expense. Our rooms are upholstered in pale blue satin, which shows up Lady Ducayne's

"She has the handsomest suite of rooms in the hotel. My bedroom is inside hers, the sweetest room-all blue satin and white lace—white enameled furniture — looking-glasses on every wall, till I know my pert little profile as I never saw it before. The room was really meant for Lady Ducayne's itting by the heaped up olive logs in the overheated salon—thought of that dressing room, but she ordered one of the blue satin couches to be arranged as a bed for me-the prettiest little bed, which I can wheel near the window on sunny mornings, as it is on castors, and easily moved about. I feel as if Lady Ducayne were a funny old grandmother, who had suddenly appeared in my life, very, very sick, and in her carriage, and all the evening in her armchair close to the fire, and was not at all exacting. I read aloud to her a good deal, and she dozes and nods while I read. Sometimes I hear her moaning in her sleep as if she had troublesome dreams. When she is tired of my reading she orders Francine, her maid, to read a French novel to her, and I hear her chuckle and groan now and then, as if she was more interested in those books than in Dickens or Scott. My French is not good enough to follow Francine, who reads very quickly. I have a great deal of liberty, for Lady Ducayne often tells me to run away amuse myself. I roam about the hills for hours. Everything is so lovely. I lose myself in olive woods, always climbing up and up towards the pine woods above-and above the pines there are the snow mountains that just show their white peaks above the dark hills. Oh, you poor dear, how can I ever make you understand what this place is like—you, whose poor, tired eyes have only the opposite side of Beresford street? Sometimes I go no farther than the terrace in front of the hotel, which is a favorite lounging place with everybody. The gardens lie below, and the tennis courts, where I sometimes play with a very nice girl, the only person in the hotel with whom I have made friends. She is a year older than I and has come to Ferrino with her brother, a doctora medical student, who is going to be a doctor. He passed his M. B. exam. at Edinburgh just before they left home. Lotta told me. He came to Italy entirely on his sister's account. She had a troublesome chest attack last summer, and was ordered to winter abroad. They are orphans, quite alone in the world, and so fond of each other. It is very nice for me to have such a friend as Lotta. She is so thoroughly respectable. I can't help using that word, for some of the girls in this hotel go on in a way that I know you would shudder at

"'He treats me like a child,' she told me, 'but I don't mind, for it's nice to know somebody loves me and cares about what I do, and even about my thoughts.' "Perhaps this is what makes some girls so eager to marry—the want of some one strong and brave and honst and true to care for them and order them about. I want no one, mother darling, for I have you, and you are all the world to me. No husband could ever come between us two. If I were ever to marry he would have only the second place in my heart. But I don't suppose I shall ever marry or even know what it is like to have an offer in marriage. No young man live with such an old woman as Lady Ducayne, but then he does not know how poor we are—you and I—and what a wonderful life this seems to me in this lovely place. I feel a selfish wretch for enjoying all my luxuries, while you, who want them so much more than I, have none of them—hardly know what they are like—do you, dearest?—for my scamp of a father began to go to the dogs soon after you were married, and since then life has been all trouble and care and struggle for you.'

This letter was written when Bella had been less than a month at Cap Ferrino, before the novelty had worn off the landscape, and before the pleasure of luxurious surroundings had begun to cloy. She wrote to her mother every week, such long letters as girls who have lived in closest companionship with a mother alone can write; letters that are like a diary of heart and mind. She wrote gaily always; but when the new year begun, Mrs. Rolleston thought she de-tected a note of melancholy under all those lively details about the place and the people.

"My poor girl is getting homesick." she thought. "Her heart is in Beresford

It might be that she missed her new friend and companion, Lotta Stafford, who had gone with her brother for a little tour to Genoa and Spezzia, and little tour to Genoa and Spezzia, and as far as Pisa. Visitors at the hotel had told her that the air of Cap Ferrino was relaxing—better suited to age than to youth, to sickness than to health. No doubt it was so. She was not so well as she had been at Walworth; but she told herself that she was suffering only from the pain of separation from the dear companion of her girlhood, the mother who had been nurse, sister, friend, flatterer, all things in the world to her. She had shed many tears over that parting, had spent many a melancholy hour on the marble terrace, with yearning eyes looking westward, and with her heart's desire a thousand miles away.

Heat Killed Poor Mary Ellen While She Was Ironing.

New York, Aug. 16 .- Standing dead against the wall, near a table at which she had been ironing, the body of an aged domestic, known only as Mary Ellen was found early Friday morning in the kitchen of Dr. Sarah E. De Hart-Fernald's residence, No. 4511 Jersey avenue, Jersey City. Mary Ellen, who was faiendless, had been engaged by Dr. De-Hart-Fernald to do light usework, and when the family left for the country she remained in charge of the house. Mr. De Hart-Fernald returned early yesterday. After repeated rings at the doorbell a window was forced. Going down stairs, he called for Ellen, and, meeting with no response, hurried to the kitchen. There he found the body of the old domestic. Her eyes were half closed, her sleeves rolled up and irons and clothes were near by. She had been dead about 24 hours. The heat, causing heart failure, was given as the cause of death. The body was taken to the morgue. Dr. De Harte will, however, arrange for the funeral.

Two Young Men Plunge Together Under a Train.

Roberts and Friend left this city to gether. The finding of a letter, in which was set forth their purpose to die together, has confirmed the theory of premeditated suicide. The compact was made when the two young men where out of employment and it was carried into execution only after each had tried to better his position in life and failed.

With hands firmly clasped they entered upon their last step. The night was dark and the train crew could not discern the two bodies upon the track. The headless runks of the two men were not found until the section men went over the road the next

It is the case of Mrs. John Weese, wife of the widely-known veteran stage proprietor, whose life, for months, had been despaired of. From the accumulated water pecular to this disease, she became so helpless as to be unable to drag one foot after the other. She now appears on the street and other. Some Odd Experiences Where the Thermometer is Phenomenally High.

A Glass Factory Where Boys Toiled While Hats Melted!

No one can tell how high a temperature man can endure until he is subjected to the trial. The effect of an intensely heated atmosphere in causing death has been but little studied. "Some years since," says Dr. Taylor, the eminent jurisprudent, "I was consulted in once case in which the captain of a steam vessel was charged with manslaughter for causing a man to be lashed within a short distance of the stoke-hole of the furnace. The man died in a few hours, apparently from the effects of his exposure. Yet the engine rooms of steamers in the tropics have been observed to have a temperature of high as 140, and engineers after a time become habituated to this excessive heat, without appearing to suffer materially in health. In certain manufactories the body appears to acquire a power, by habit, of resisting these high temperatures; still it has been proved that many suffer severely. In a report on the employment of children (London), it is stated that in a glass manufactory a thermometer held close to a boy's head stood at 130 degrees and as the inspector stood near to observe the instrument his hat actually melted out of shape. Another boy had his hair singed by the heat, and said that his clothes were sometimes singed, too, while a third worked in a temperature no less than 150 degrees. Amid this tremendous heat they carry on work which requires their constant attention. They are incessantly in motion.

In the Turkish baths higher temperatures than this have been noted, but there is reason to believe that serious symptoms have been occasionally produced in persons unaccustomed to them, and that in one or two cases death has resulted. All sudden changes from a low to a high temperature are liable to cause death ir aged persons The mother's instinct had been true. dicative of an effect on the brain, and nace he was observed to fall suddenly on the floor in a state of insensibility. her orange suck in sheer gladness of heart as her light feet skipped over the rough ground and the coarse grass on the mountain side. The odor of rosemary and thyme, the fresh breath of the sea no longer filled her with rapture.

She thought of Beresford street and country. In some cases a person may sink and die from exhaustion, or symptoms of serebral disturbance may continue for some time and the case ultimately prove fatal.

Death from sunstroke, when it is not immediately fatal, is preceded by some well-marked symptoms, such as weakness, giddiness, headache, disturbed vision, flushing of the face, followed by oppression and difficulty of breathing, and in some cases stupor, passing into profound coma. The skin is dry and hot, and the heat of the body is much greater than natural.

. A TERRIFIC SEA FIGHT. The Prince of Monaco has recently announced his intention to send his yacht on an expedition of discovery among the haunts of the sperm whale. This leads Mr. Frank T. Bullen to relate in Nature some of his experiences with whales and he tells a story of a fight of sea monsters in the Strait of Malacca which reads like a romance. The fight occurred in a smooth sea on a moonlight night, and Mr. Bullen watched it from the deck of a ship with the aid of a night glass. His attention was first attracted by a commotion in the water, which he supposed might be caused by a volcanic disturbance of the sea bed. Examination with the glass showed a very large sperm whale engaged in deadly conflict with a monster squid or devilfish, whose tentacles encircled the whale's body. "The livid whiteness of those writhing arms, which enlaced the cachalot (whale) like a nest of mighty serpents stood out in bold relief against the black, boulder-like head of the aggressor." The aggressor was the whale, squids being a favorite prey of sperm whales. "Presently the whale raised itself half out of water, and we plainly saw the awful-looking head of the gigantic mollusk. At our distance, something under a mile, it appeared about the size of one of our largest oil casks, which held 336 gallons. Like the rest of the squid visible it was of a pe-culiar dead white, and in it gleamed two eyes of inky blackness about a foot in diameter. To describe the wonderful contortions of those two monsters is far beyond my powers. All around the combatants were either smaller whales or immense sharks. who were evidently assisting in the destruction of the squid, and getting a full share of the feast." Mr. Bullen says the encircling tentacles gradually slipped off the whale's body, and

A sad accident took place on the farm of Mr. Joseph Waddel, 4th con-cession of Kinloss, by which his son Henry lost his life. They were engaged in drawing grain, and the boy was backing the wagon out of the barn, when part of the rack gave way and threw him to the ground. He fell on his head and broke his neck. Some and killed Mr. Waddel's wife, and since that time the same team nearly killed himself.

ONE FACT

Outweighs a Thousand Claims-It Is Facts We Give You Backed Up by London Proof.

Facts are what we want. Opinions won't do. They differ.

It is hard to pick the correct ones. Even doctors disagree. You have a backache. One friend tells you to use plasters. They will cure the backache. That Another recommends a liniment. You follow the advice of one; perhaps both. But are you cured?

We think not. The ache perhaps leaves for a time. But it comes back. You don't reach the cause. Go for the kidneys, and the backache goes.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kid-That is why they cure backache. This is a fact which can be proven.

London people say so. Here is one: Mrs. Mary Wonnacot, 380 Clarence street, London Ont., says: "I have had serious kidney troubles for fourteen years. For the past two years I have been a great sufferer. The doctor said I had what is called 'floating kidney.' I have suffered very much with pain in the back and right side, also neuralgic pains in my head. I was nervous, could not sleep well, had no appetite and was completely dragged out. I was in great distress all the time, and felt thoroughly miserable and sick.

"For many years I tried a great number of medicines in order to get relief, but all without avail, until I sent to Strong's drug store and got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I told my doctor I had got them, and he said they would undoubtedly do me good, and they have done so, far beyond my expectations. Since I have been taking them I have felt better every day. They have relieved me and help-ed me in all the distressing ailments to which I was subject. I am stronger; have no more pain. Appetite is much better, and in every way I feel they have done me the greatest good. It is a great thing for me that at last I have found something that suits my case, and which I know benefits me as no other remedy could do."
