Miners and Mining Companies Must Have Licenses Before Recording

ruling on mining in Yukon, but the following month he had to change it. The chief features of the second edition were: Reduction of claims to 100 feet in length; reduction of renewal fees, from $100 to $15 yearly; imposition of a royalty of 10 per cent. on monthly output of $500, and of 20 per cent. over $500, besides the reservation of every alternate claim. From end to end of the Dominion these regulations were condemned as ruinous and impracticable.

Then Mr. Sifton began unwillingly to retreat, and after his returnifrom the Alaskan coast it was announced that the proposal as to the reservation of alternate claims would not be enforced and that a large reduction would be made in that a large reduction would be made in the royalty proposed. The new regula-tions carry out these promises. There is recognition of "miners' law" in the matter of registration at distant camps; the license system is adopted.
Under the new regulations miners' licenses will be issued for $10 for an in-definite time for individuals and $500 for companies, and the fee for reserving, be $15 with an annual renewal of $15. Claims will be 250 feet in length, and the government will reserve every alternate block of ten claims.

River or digging claims will be leased in five mile sections for $100 a year per Claims producing over $2,500 a year will pay a royalty of 10 per cent. In a mining camp situated more than 100 miles from a gold commissioner's office, the miners, if more than five in number may elect their own recorder and record their claims with him, pending regular registration within three months.

The Times' special despatch from Ottawa thus states certain of the new regu-
