

THE CANADIAN METHODIST MAGAZINE.

NOVEMBER, 1886.

THROUGH THE OLD DOMINION AND THE CAROLINAS.

II.

VIADUCTS NEAR HENRY'S, W. N. C. R. R.

THE base of the Blue Ridge, in North Carolina, is reached at Morganton, via the Western North Carolina Railroad, and the glorious panorama of mountain scenery begins to unfold itself to the delighted vision. The Table Rock, a giant mountain of granite stretching up 4,000 feet, with its flat surface of twenty acres and its perpendicular sides reaching into the dark valleys below, presents a most striking outline against the blue sky beyond it, and in juxtaposition is the Hawk's Bill, a lonely, barren rock over 4,000 feet high, which seems to have been