DOOMED TO FIRE.

attention of some 20,000 people during four consecutive hours.

THE FIRM.

About 10.30 yesterday evening pedestrians on St. James street and Victoria Square perceived a strong smell of burning wood in the atmosphere. After some search, flames were at last seen to be bursting through the roof of Messrs. Bobert Miller & Co.'s binding establishment on Victoria Square. Constable Green sounded the alarm of fire from box No. 9, but before the firemen arrived on the scene the fiames had gained such terrible headway as to almost preclude the possibility of saving the block. Chief Patton soon had his men to work, throwing streams of water on the burning building. The Skinner ladders were raised to the roofs of the adjoining warehouses and the firemen mounted boldly up and fought the fire from on high. Despite their most desperate efforts the fire continued to gain steadily. Gradually, step by step, it drove the men back from the roof of Messrs. Greenshields' establishment, claiming this portion of the building also for its own. The firemen retreated to the roof of Mr. Clendinneng's store, but in ten minutes it got so hot beneath their feet that they had to retire still further. In a surprisingly shortspace of time the fire gained a complete mastery over the whole upper portion of the block. The furniture warehouse of Mr. Henry J. Shaw was at one time thought to be doomed to destruction, but the exertions of the brigade saved it with but little comparative loss. The fire lasted from 10.30 in the evening till about 2 o'clock this morning, and is still smouldering. About one o'clock the spectacle was magnificent. Immense pillars of flame burst up from the burning block, throwing a light around to which electricity was but a candle. Great fears were entertained of an explosion as it was whispered in the crowd that Mr. Clendinneng had powder stored in his portion of the building.

The following is only an estimate of the losses incurred by the fire:—

large book-binding and stationery stock is a total wreck. The stock is valued at about $75,000, and is insured in the Scottish Imperial, Northern, London and Lancashire, Ætnn, Hartford and Queen's Companies for about $45,000.

MESSES. MCINTYRE, FRENCH & CO'S

dry goods stock is greatly damaged by water, although the fire only burnt a small portion of the top flat. The stock is valued at between $200,000 and $300,000, and is insured for about one-third of its value. In the top flat was stored a very large quantity of their winter's stock of woollen goods, which had been packed away for the summer. The building occupied by them, as well as that occupied by Mesers. Robert Miller & Co., was owned by Messrs. MoIntyre, French & Co., and were both insured. The building is probably worth about $250,000.

occupied the first flat and basement under the Messrs. Greenshields' dry-goods store as a stove warehouse, and his stock will, in all probability, suffer material damage by water. The building occupied by the Messrs. THE BRIGADE.

During the whole progress of last night's terrible fire the Montreal Fire Brigade acted, both collectively and individually, as a brave body of men should who are willing to risk their lives at the call of duty. Several of the firemen had narrow escapes from death. Three of them, Shaw, McBride and Wood, all of No. 9 Station, on arriving at the fire, mounted on the Skinner ladder to the top of the burning building, occupied by Messrs Miller, and in the face of a seething furnace of flame poured in a strong stream of water into the flery vortex. The position was not tenable, however. The flames gathered in their furious strength and forced them half wasted and suffocated down to the ground. The bricks, loosened by the terrible heat, fell in showers about their ears, but they managed to escape in safety.

The ringing of the bells of the reels as the firemen hurry to a fire always attract the public to the scene, but never in the history of Montreal was such a crowd assembled at a fire as there was last night. The roots of the houses on the opposite sides of the Square and Craig street were black with eager spectators. Victorla Square itself was 1.30 the fire again broke out on the roof of packed so that there was scarcely standing room, and some rash spinits would have forced themselves beneath the walls of the burning buildings were it not for Sergeant St. Plerre and his cordon of police. There were fully 20,000 people witnessing the fire. The crowds extended up Alexander and Bleury streets as far Laguchetiere west, as far as St. Antoine east, as far as Bleury, and all McGill street was one mass of upturned faces.

On returning hurried to the press room. On opening the of flame and smoke which sent him staggering back faint and half suffocated. He spread the alarm and in a few moments the composing and editorial rooms were emptied of the safety of the sidewalk. Meanwhile Mr. Wallace sounded the alarm from box No. 12. and the firemen, under the command of Chief Patton, were almost immediately on hand. Streams of water at once played on all sides into the already doomed building. At this juncture, Mr. Williams and Mr. Jarvis, of Finance and Commerce. the editorial staff, and Mr. Quinn, a printer, bethought themselves of the innates of the coms above the composing department. Mr. Gunn, the janitor of the building, his wife and daughter. The three seized her in his arms and bore her to a place of safety through archways of flame. Messrs. Quinn and Williams meanwhile battered in the door of Mrs. Gunn's apartment. They found that lady lying prostrate on the floor, suffocated by the smoke which bad already gathered in dense volumes in the room. To snatch her up was the work of a moment. The two brave men had no time to spare, already the flames were eating into the stairway by which lay their only avenue of escape. Luckily it stood the pressure of the a few yards behind when it succumbed to the fury of the flame and crashed into the firey vortex. Miss Gunn, though somewhat frightened at so near an escape from so terrible a death, was comparatively uninjured. Mrs. Gunn, however, has received a severe-mental shock, from which she will only recover after some time. The two rescued ladies were conveyed to the St. Lawrence Hall, where the genial proprietors saw that they were furnished with every comfort. The fire still continued with unabated fury. The press room was long since a prey of the flames, and were mounting upwards to the higher portions of the building, when the good work of the brigade began to make itself felt. The fire after some desperate work was at length controlled. The loss is very severe. The press room is a total wreck, the job room on the next flat shared its fate, stroyed, as also a considerable portion of the business office. The bindery, occupying the two topmost storeys, was devoured by the fire in an incredibly short space of time. Mr. Cochenthaler's jewellery store 'vext to the Herald office was considerably damaged by water. The loss is not accurately estimated, but it cannot be less than $60,000. About

WEEKLY REVIEW - WHOLESALE PRICES.

There is no material change to note in the trade situation. As was to be expected during election week, the turn over of staple goods was not large and business was somewhat unsettled, manufacturers in many branches being somewhat slarmed at the prospect, remote through it appeared, of a change of Government and an alteration of fined Seal oil is firm at 70c to 721c per the tariff. No failures of any importance imperial gallon. Cod oil 571c to 60c. reported, and payments to whole-houses continued satisfactory were 8816 enough. The money market ruled easy with a large supply of loanable capital available at the banks, the rate on Stock Exchange securities being 5, 51 and 6 per cent on call and 'time. Money was advanced on mercantile paper at 6 to 7 per cent Despite the fact that the "bears" predict a panic on the Stock Exchange if the Opposition carry the elections our local stocks and bonds have remained strong up to the very polling day, so that it is to be assumed our shrewd brokers and operators in securities are not apprehensive that the Government will be defeated. With the warmer weather the city dry goods trade has brightened up a little, and we are glad to notice this, as the backward spring seriously curtailed the volume of business in this line. The supply of Canadian cotton is increasing, and of some sorts is about equal to the demand at last, ,
