ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AND THE ROLE OF WOMEN

KEY TO AFRICAN DEVELOPMENT

NAIROBI, KENYA

The Secretary of State for External Affairs, the Right Honourable Joe Clark, accompanied by the Canadian High Commissioner, Miss A. Raynell Andreychuk, today visited a joint Canadian International Agency (CIDA) - CARE Canada Integrated Rural Development Project near Kisumu, on Lake Victoria.

Mr. Clark echoed remarks made earlier in the day in a speech at a United Nations Environment Program (UNEP) luncheon, where he noted the central role of environmental preservation in economic development, and the decisive place of women in Africa's agriculture. The two sites visited today reflect Mr. Clark's themes: enhancing the economic skills of women in Africa and halting environmental degradation through water management and reforestation.

At the Osare Women's Group site, Mr. Clark toured a fishing project, as well as witnessed a demonstration of fishing and boat construction. The women's group which markets its products and produce, creates local employment and is also generating needed income from the local fresh water fishery. Mr. Clark participated in a tree-planting ceremony with the Honourable H.J. Kosgey, Minister of Culture and Social Services.
