memories of past glories. She will never be able to put her best foot forward; she will scarcely be able to stir either foot. She will be doomed to stand still, a link with the past, but out of step with to-day and an anachronism to-morrow.

Citizens of Montreal and graduates of the University will be interested to read the considered judgment of a scholar and expert on the condition of the Museums of McGill and will be concerned to know that their high educational value in illustrating the history of Canada in particular and of Man in general is greatly reduced by the grave limitations which Dr. Fox describes. The museum departments of the University have a special appeal to many people, who have given, and given with great generosity. But to put it quite bluntly, it is now plain that further additions of material, so necessary for the growth and development of our museums, will embarrass rather than assist the work of the University, unless proper facilities for housing and exhibition are at the same time provided. It is my hope that this report of Dr. Fox will arouse and stimulate an interest which will not cease until we have at McGill a first class museum.
